2 GRITS WALK OUT ON 'QUEEN'

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Quebec Liberal MPs refused to stand and two others left the Commons today when MPs rose to sing God Save the Queen after issuing a message of congratulation to the Queen for the 25th anniversary of her reign Sunday.

Louis Duclos (L — Montmorency) and Jacques Olivier (L—Longueuil) remained in their seats as those around them rose to sing the British anthem. Serge Joyal (L—Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemont) and Claude-Andre Lachance (L—Montreal Lafontaine-Rosemont) left the chamber.

But the two returned, and all four joined the House in singing O Canada after the tribute to the Queen.

Buckingham Palace announced today that the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will visit Canada from Oct. 14 to Oct. 19 as part of jubilee year celebrations.

The visit will centre on Ottawa.

WCB Probe Demand

The Workmen's Compensation Board Employees Union has condemned the government-commissioned P. S. Ross report on the board and has asked Labor Minister Allan Williams to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the WCB objectively.

The call for a Royal Commission came in a brief submitted to the minister by the more than 1,000-member union.

The 23-page brief damns the Ross report and says Williams must move quickly to appoint a new chairman.

The controversial Ross report was released last year. The board has been without a chairman since Williams fired NDP-appointed Terry Ison in January 1976.

"One year without leadership is too long," the brief says.

The union charges that the continuation of the atmosphere of confrontation surrounding the WCB will impede the delivery of vital services.

"We believe that this heated debate will subside only after

BOY, 10, LATEST VICTIM OF HOLDUP

A 10-year-old boy Wednesday became Greater Victoria's latest holdup victim.

Henry Lem was minding his parents' store, the L & N Market at 530 Craigflower, when a thin man wearing a grey toque and sunglasses walked in at 8:40 p.m., said he had a gun and demanded money.

The boy, who thought he saw what appeared to be the handle of a gun sticking out of the man's pocket, handed over $290 in the till.

The man grabbed the money and ran off.

Police said the boy's mother was in the back of the store at the time.

Asked today if he was frightened, Henry replied, "Yeah, I guess so."

His seven-year-old sister, Joyce, sat reading a comic bood throughout the robbery and was unaware of what was going on.

The robbery brings to 15 the number of armed incidents in Greater Victoria this year.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory warned storeowners Wednesday to remove temptation by keeping as little cash as possible on the premises.

Neither he nor Saanich police chief Bob Peterson believe there is any particular reason for the holdups other than a general increase in violent crimes across Canada.

Gregory urged people to be alert during robberies, and not try anything, but concentrate on getting a detailed description of the robber, his clothing and of route taken in fleeing.

BENNETT PROBES LEAK

'NDPer Blacklist' Sent to Nielsen

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

An alleged blacklist identifying certain civil servants as members of the NDP was sent to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen shortly after the Socreds took power in late 1975, the NDP opposition revealed Wednesday.

Premier Bill Bennett denied the list is a blacklist and ordered an investigation by the attorney-general into what he termed a "major leak" of confidential government papers.

The list identifies eight employees of the then-department of lands as "NDPers" and was forwarded to Nielsen under the heading "PERSONAL AND STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL" by Dan Campbell, ex-Socred cabinet minister and now director of inter-governmental affairs.

There is no indication that any action has been taken against any of the employees identified, who include NDP-appointees to the land management branch and the Environment and Land Use Committee secretariat.

The list of employees is contained in a letter dated Dec. 23, 1975, to Campbell from Klaus Ohlemann, an employee of the land management branch.

The hand-written letter is headed simply "Dan," and charges that in the past few days "NDP supporters from different departments have held strategy meetings in an attempt to persuade the new ministers to carry on certain projects, take certain stands, continue policies, etc."

The letter identifies as "key people who have influenced the NDP in terms of government policy in lands and the secretariat:"

—Norm Pearson, deputy lands minister (whose order-in-council appointment was rescinded shortly after);

—Al Raine, ski development co-ordinator, still with the government;

—John Webster, special projects, lands management, still on contract;

—George Wilson, still director of the lands management branch;

—Frank Edgell, still assistant director;

—John Secter, environmental services unit, still with the government (the list also says Secter's staff is NDP);

—Allistair Crerar, former director of the ELUC secretariat (now on an exchange program working for the federal government);

—Dennis O'Gorman, then assistant-director of ELUC secretairat and now acting director (list identifies his "total staff" as NDP).

The letter says Pearson, Raine, Webster and Secter worked "extremely closely" with former NDP resources minister Bob Williams and says "some" helped in his campaign.

The letter also says the staff under John O'Rierdan, of the secretariat special projects unit, was NDP, but that O'Rierdan himself was the "black sheep of the Secretariat."

Accompanying the letter to Campbell, and also sent by Campbell to Nielsen, are two organizational charts of the land management branch containing several pencilled notations of "NDP" beside a few names.

Ohlemann, still an employee of the land management branch, could not be reached for comment.

About 10 minutes after the NDP released his letter in the legislature, his secretary reported he had just left on trip up-island and could not be reached.

The package of material sent by Campbell to Nielsen also includes a memo to Niel-

RAINE SEEKS RETRACTION

RAINE
. . . 'dreaming tales'

Ski consultant Al Raine — one of eight people named as an NDPer in the document the opposition calls a blacklist — reacted angrily today.

Raine, hired by the NDP and still working on a government ski development project, said today he has contacted his lawyer and plans to demand a retraction and a public apology from Klaus Othlemann, the man who prepared the list.

"He must have been sitting in a corner and dreaming up tales," Raine said.

Raine said he has never been a member of the NDP.

"I'm pretty a-political, but I've been well-known for my free enterprise sentiments."

He said it does not bother him especially to be identified as an NDPer but he is upset over being labelled an election campaign helper of former resources minister Bob Williams.

"I'm shocked that the letter (from Ohlemann to Campbell) wasn't returned, shocked that it was forwarded (to Neilsen)," he said.

Raine said he has had suspicions over the past year that he was getting the "cold shoulder" from the new administration because he was hired by the NDP, "but I figured it was just my little complexes coming out."

He said Ohlemann seems to have labeled anyone who worked with former deputy lands minister, Norm Pearson or who was hired by the NDP, as a radical left-winger.

Raine said he has met Ohlemann several times and "now I'm surprised he could look people in the eye and say friendly things."

Another government employee on the list, Lands Management branch director George Wilson said today he is not now and never has been a member of the NDP.

"I have worked for the government for over 25 years and have never considered the politics of the day," he said.

Wilson said he had always tried to keep out of politics anl has never held a card in any political party.

No Track Deal- Nielsen Says

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Wednesday he made no representations to the B.C. Land Commission on an application by Meadow Creek Farms to allow quarter-horse racing on agricultural land in Surrey.

Nielsen said during question period in the legislature that he did visit the area with commission chairman Gary Runka and Meadow Creek president Captain Harry Terry, but that no deals were made.

"I don't think that (the tour) was improper in any way," said Nielsen.

A spokesman for the commission has confirmed it has approved Meadow Creek's application to set up a permanent racetrack in Surrey's Hazelmere Valley.

The commission under the former NDP government had refused to allow the racetrack, but that commission's members were fired by Nielsen on Oct. 7, 1976.

The decision to allow the racetrack to go ahead brought a demand Wednesday in the legislature by opposition MLAs that the government call an inquiry to determine why and how the commission gave the project the go-ahead.

It was also reported that some senior agriculture department staff are considering asking their minister, Jim Hewitt, to file a formal appeal against the removal of the racetrack land from the agricultural reserve.

However Hewitt said today he had not heard anything from his staff that he file a formal appeal of the decision.

"I haven't heard anything yet but I would certainly

McCarthy Confirms Back Pay

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy minister in charge of the civil service, issued a five-page news release Wednesday on earlier news stories about a Management Executive Group (MEG) plan which covers some 1,300 senior civil servants and other government employees excluded from union coverage because of the confidential nature of their jobs.

McCarthy said the release was "in reference to erroneous information given through the media."

McCarthy's outline of the plan was essentially the same as the story carried by The Times Wednesday.

The 1,300 civil servants have received a cash and fringe benefits package which amounts to as much as 17 per cent per year over the past three years.

For a deputy minister earning $39,000 a year, this would mean he can now claim $13,000 in retroactive pay or benefits, with an additional $6,630 payable April 1.

McCarthy said the plan should not be regarded as a wage increase.

She said provincial govern-

Police Mull Strike

NELSON (CP) — Police here will consider strike action unless the federal Anti-Inflation Board permits more than a 12-per-cent wage increase, Derek Price, president of the Nelson police association said Wednesday. Wages for Nelson officers are as much as $4,000 a year less than that paid RCMP officers and other municipal police force officers in British Columbia, he said. Disruptive, inequitable decisions by the Anti-Inflation Board have driven the Canadian Police Association to talk about going on strike, says Corporal Phil Jamieson of Saanich, president of the 45,000-member group. Ottawa Cost-Share Plan Leaves Provinces Angry

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial finance ministers left Ottawa Wednesday angry about federal plans to change major cost-sharing agreements.

The scheduled two-day meeting ended in a sour note at noon Wednesday after another wrangling session over Ottawa's imposed proposals to end dollar-matching arrangements for hospital insurance, medical care and post-secondary education. The provinces claim they will lose money in the deal, possibly as much as $800 million.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald promised to take the provincial concerns to his cabinet colleagues before legislation to put the changes into effect by transferring more taxing power to the provinces comes before Parliament next week.

The complicated dispute over shared-cost programs was hammered out in broad outline by Prime Minister Trudeau and provincial premiers last December and is now being refined by officials.

Contrary to Prime Minister Trudeau's claim that the provinces stand to gain $680 million in new taxing power and grants from the deal, it now seems they could lose up to $800 million, Manitoba Finance Minister Saul Miller claimed.

The problem arises partly because Ottawa will cut off its current 50-50 dollar matching plans for health and education on March 31. The provinces are expected to use the money they get from additional tax-raising power Ottawa gave them effective Jan. 1 to partly replace the federal money they no longer receive.

But the provinces claim that because of the lag involved in receiving medical bills from doctors paid by the provincial governments, and other problems, they will encounter a serious cash flow problem if the federal payments stop abruptly in March.

RCMP Stole Blacklist Documents: MP

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The information which formed the basis for a 1971 "blacklist" of civil servants and others was stolen by the RCMP from the offices of a now-defunct organization in Toronto during a fire, Conservative MP Frank Oberle charged Wednesday.

Outside the Commons Oberle said he hoped his revelation of the burglary would prompt the government to reveal everything there is to know about the list.

He said the files from the Toronto, company's office were found to be missing by the head of the company "during the fire or shortly after." The company no longer exists, he said.

The files contained "all the information that would have been necessary to compile the extra-parliamentary opposition list."

In Toronto, Prof. Howard Buchbinder, one of the founders of Praxis, a social action organization that spearheaded a "Poor People's Conference" in Toronto in 1970, said that files were discovered missing following a fire in that organization's offices in December, 1970.

Praxis figures prominently in the letter from then solicitor general Jean-Pierre Goyer which accompanied the list and was circulated to five fellow cabinet members.

Buchbinder said Wednesday that following the fire of unknown origin which did not damage the offices, he and fellow staff members found that the quarters had been very selectively burgled.

Items taken included cheque stubs, registration forms for the Poor People's Conference and the mailing list for a newsletter issued by the group.

"It was clear that whoever took the information was after certain items; nothing else in the files was disturbed," Buchbinder said Wednesday.

Oberle would not disclose any other details of the incident, saying he would do so today in the Commons if the government refuses to either supply the details or provide an inquiry or other forum "so I can tell what I know."

"I have information which makes me very nervous about the thing," said the MP who first divulged the list without the names, and Goyer letter, in the Commons last week.

In the Commons, Prime Minister Trudeau told Oberle that "the names of the people on that list came through the RCMP security services in the normal course of their operations."

Oberle then asked whether Trudeau considered it "to be the normal course of an operation of a security service of the RCMP to illegally enter the offices of a legally-constituted corporation during a fire and selectively burglarize such an office."

The prime minister, after saying he was confused by the

Murchie's Workers Given Lie Tests

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Employees at five Murchie's tea and coffee stores here are being tested with a psychological stress evaluator every three months in an effort to eradicate a theft problem.

None of the employees at the Victoria branch at 623 Fort are involved in the program which has been in effect for the past year.

Gwen Murchie, the company's personnel manager, said the lie detectors, which are supposed to detect and measure graphically displays of stress-related components in the human voice, were brought in after the wallets of several employees were stolen while they were at work.

"No one has to take the test, their job doesn't depend on it," said Murchie. "It's a way of proving your innocence. No one has ever refused to take it."

She said staff put pressure on the company to do something about the theft problem and "it was their unanimous decision to try this device."

Murchie refused to say whether anyone has been caught as a result of taking the test, but added that the problem was virtually eliminated.

Meanwhile, an employee who asked not to be identified said one worker was fired after being branded a thief by test administrators and others have been reduced to tears. She said most co-workers would refuse to take the tests in the future.

The employee said the lie detector proposal was approved by the workers because "everybody was afraid to speak up about it."

One warehouse worker said: "we voted for it because we wanted to clear up suspicion. Anybody who doesn't want to take it doesn't have to."

Lottery Buyers Called Childish

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto psychiatrist says government-run lotteries have dangerous psychological aspects and are breeding a generation of gamblers.

Dr. Jerry Cooper, head of the psychiatric unit of York-Finch General Hospital, said in a recent interview the get-rich-quick appeal of the lottery is a sign of crumbling values in a society that has lost faith in the old-fashioned work ethic.

People no longer believe that "hard work, sacrifice and the sweat of the brew will gain them some security," he said.

Many who buy $5 to $10 lottery tickets for a chance at up to $1 million in tax-free prize money actually believe they are going to win despite odds which lottery officials admit are astronomical, he said.

It is childish and immature to think that playing lottery games is the way to get ahead, he said.

He said Canadian lotteries flourish on people's false expectations, just as mobsters in large U.S. cities exploit the dreams of the ghetto poor with the illegal numbers racket.

He said Canadian provincial and national lotteries appeal mainly to middle-income wage earners who see them as their only chance to get out from under mortgages and government-controlled wages.

Since the Olympic Lottery, now called Loto-Canada, had its first draw in April, 1974, Canadians have spent more than $700 million on lottery tickets in the major national and provincial lotteries.

Guards Protest Pen Transfer

MONCTON (CP) — RCMP were called to Moncton airport Wednesday night when guards from the penitentiary at nearby Dorchester, gathered to protest the arrival of four prisoners from the British Columbia Penitentiary.

Twenty maximum-security prisoners arrived shortly after 10 p.m. on a Canadian armed forces Hercules aircraft but the guards were objecting to the transfer of only four, whom they said had not been screened.

The guards, led by Percy Weatherby, president of the Dorchester guards' local of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, had planned to block the passage of vehicles carrying the prisoners.

Only a handful of the guards managed to be at the right exit at the right time.

They stood in front of oncoming vehicles until advised by a rifle-carrying RCMP constable that the road was icy and it could be dangerous not to move out of the way.

There were no incidents and Weatherby said the guards would have obeyed any orders from the RCMP.

Weatherby said two of the four prisoners concerned were involved in a hostage-taking incident last year at the Prince Albert Penitentiary.

He said a committee sent to B.C. had screened 18 prisoners but at the last minute two of the 18 decided they didn't want to move to Dorchester.

Weatherby said national penitentiaries commissioner, Andre Therrien, then ordered four others, including the two involved in the Prince Albert hostage taking, to take their place.

N-Powered Icebreaker Studied

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian coast guard is evaluating the possibility of constructing a nuclear-powered icebreaker for year-round duty in Arctic waters.

R. A. Quail, deputy coast guard commissioner, confirmed Wednesday that the federal government has invited designs for an on-board nuclear steam generator from four countries — West Germany, France, Britain and the U.S. — and now is conducting feasibility studies on those designs.

"This is all very, very tentative," Quail said, "and there has been no decision to go ahead and build a ship. Cabinet has to decide on that. We just want to see if we can do it and how much it's going to cost."

The submission of the power plant designs is a revival of an earlier plan begun two years before, when talk of a nuclear icebreaker first started. Called Polar 7, it was a joint effort between the coast guard and Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

Initial estimates suggested that an 80,000 horsepower nuclear vessel might be built for $150 million by the mid-1980s.

question a civil servant taking that role," the minister said.

Hewitt said his staff should be guided by the land commission's decision and that government involvement or interference would weaken the system that has been set up.

The men appointed to the commission are as dedicated to the agriculture industry as the previous commissioners, Hewitt added.

And in another development, Greater Vancouver Regional District chairman Jack Campbell said he is disappointed with the land commission's decision.

"I just hope they have a good rationale for their actions," he said.

Campbell, the mayor of Port Coquitlam, said the GVRD might consider an appeal in the case.

Runka was the only NDP appointee who survived the firings which sparked speculation that countless acres of farmland would be removed from the agricultural land reserve to be developed commercially.

A spokesman for the environment ministry said the 76 acres was not excluded from the reserve but that Meadow Creek Farms is allowed under the Land Commission Act to run the track.

Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) asked Nielsen whether he is aware that a study of the area shows that the racetrack would result in water depletion costing $6 million to replace.

The minister said he would take the question as notice, meaning he might answer it later, but added that land commission rulings do not relieve applicants from meeting community regulations.

Nielsen said he is also not aware of studies done on the effects the racetrack would have on soil in the area.

When asked by Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) whether there was an application for development pending when he visited the track site, Nielsen said, "I will research that precisely."

sen from Campbell but which does not mention at all the Ohlemann letter. Campbell's memo talks only about the "top heavy bureaucracy."

Campbell told reporters Wednesday he could not remember Ohlemann and he did not recall the letter.

Bennett said in the legislature Wednesday that NDP MLA Bill King, who first introduced the documents, had made serious charges.

Bennett said it is clear that someone had abused their oath of office and oath of secrecy to leak the confidential papers to the opposition "for political gain and power."

When documents are leaked in that way, he said, it reflects on all civil servants.

"There may be other documents involved in what appears to be a major leak."

He said he will ask the attorney-general to investigate the leak.

The originals of the papers are still in Nielsen's files, Bennett said, so they must have been xeroxed, rather than stolen.

King said identification of civil servants by political affiliation is a serious charge.

He suggested the B.C. Human Rights branch be involved in the attorney-general's investigation to make sure "no worker has suffered harassment because of their political affiliation."

"Certain people have had their security of employment jeopardized by being identified as belonging to a political party."

Bennett told reporters after King first released the documents that his office gets thousands of letters which are forwarded to the appropriate departments.

He said he suspects that Campbell simply received the letter from Ohlemann and sent it along to Nielsen as a matter of course.

"I get all kinds of letters classified as hate mail telling me where to go. I get many letters classified as hate mail telling me to tell the opposition where to go," he told the legislature.

"We can't control the mail sent to us."

Nielsen said later he had taken no action against any of the people on the list and that it was not used as a blacklist.

He said he did not know Ohlemann but would question him shortly about the letter. He said it was "questionable" for a public servant to inform on other public servants.

"I never asked a civil servant their political affiliation."

Nielsen was unclear as to whether he remembered receiving the documents from Campbell.

At one point he said he couldn't say whether he remembered receiving them or not, but later he said the documents did not seem "unfamiliar."

After receiving the documents he put them in his personal file and he said he did not know how they got out.

an objective, open appraisal of the questions and charges is carried out and reasonable and just solutions are found for the problems that have developed.

The brief contains a harsh critique of the Ross report.

The union says that when the Ross consulting firm was appointed it was very concerned that the investigation was being carried on behind closed doors.

"Having read and considered the P. S. Ross report, Mr. Minister, we are dismayed to observe that our fears were not unfounded.

"The undeniable pro-employer bias of the P. S. Ross report has served to further intensify this conflict between organized labor and employers."

It came as no surprise, the brief says, that employer groups are "uncharacteristically quiet" in response to the Ross report while labor has mounted a strong public attack on its "open neglect" of their concerns.

The report recommends a major reorganization of the WCB and a severe cost-cutting program, but backs neither recommendation, the employees say.

noise in the Commons, said he did not "know what the question of a break-in and illegality has to do with this particular matter."

The Praxis Institute was constituted as an incorporated organization.

In its four-year lifespan Praxis brought together men and women in Toronto, professionals and the poor, who were interested in social change.

It flourished. Buchbinder pointed out, when a lot of things were happening in Toronto's social and political arenas.

He said Praxis worked with groups in the city, held conferences on topics like industrial democracy, attempted to influence social processes, and tried to help people understand and change the forces that prevented them from improving their status in life, or their well-being.

Another question that perturbs him relates to federal funding of poor peoples' groups in the months that followed the Poor People's Conference.

He believed that the drying up of funds for a number of the more outspoken and aggressive community groups might be related to the blacklist development and hidden security checks.

Prof. Buchbinder also cited an incident that occurred between Praxis and CMHC.

In March 1972 Praxis completed a major report called Citizen Action in Urban Canada, financed by a grant from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Towards the end of 1971, Prof. Buchbinder recalled, the Praxis researchers were called in by CMHC, which wanted to re-evaluate the project and the corporation's continued funding of it.

Prof. Buchbinder said at that time the study had been underway for a full year.

And, he asked, was this proposed re-evaluation related to the blacklist creation that occurred in June 1971?

In 1972 Praxis found it increasingly difficult to get funding for its work, money ran out and Praxis gradually sank into oblivion.

MAN STABBED

A man in his early 20s is in fairly good condition in Victoria General Hospital today after being stabbed in the Colony Motor Inn beer parlor, 2852 Douglas, Wednesday night.

Victoria police said the man, whose name is being withheld, was stabbed once in the upper right chest after an argument erupted between two groups of youths at 11:40 p.m.

The man was taken to hospital by friends. He was bleeding profusely but still conscious when admitted, police said.

Montreal Police Back

MONTREAL (CP) — City police ended today the work slowdown begun Monday in a contract dispute over pension funds.

A police spokesman said officers began resuming normal patrols about 11 a.m. EST.

"The justice minister has shown us he is honestly trying to settle the differences between the police and the administration," a police spokesman said.

Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard has attempted since the slowdown began to get police representatives and Montreal's public security council to meet and settle the issue.

The security council, headed by interim president Yves Ryan, had refused to negotiate the main issue of pension funds while police conducted the slowdown.

Marc Allard, director of the 5,200-member Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood, said union representatives agreed to tell the officers to return to work.

During the three days in which police did not conduct normal street patrols and responded only to emergency calls, there were 131 armed robberies — about three times the normal number — and five slayings.

McCarthy Confirms Back Pay

ment approval of the payments was made July 17, 1976, in an order-in-council, but benefits were withheld until federal Anti-Inflation Board approval Nov. 19, 1976.

She said that once board approval was obtained for the package, the persons benefiting had to apply for the bonuses and some may still be in the process of receiving them.

Mrs. McCarthy said no more than 60 per cent of the bonuses can be paid in cash.

The balance must be taken in the form of benefits including choice of holiday pay, early retirement, sabbatical or education leave, sick leave, and an option to channel the money into the government's pension plan, or pay professional dues and membership fees.

All the employees covered by the plan are, for various reasons, excluded from belonging to a union and the plan is an attempt to compensate them, she said.

The high contract settlements awarded to government employees covered by a union contract demanded that the management personnel be brought up in kind, she said.

"It (the MEG plan) is merely an attempt to treat management employees fairly by providing compensation for the rights and benefits granted to the vast majority of public servants, but which have been denied to management because they are barred from benefiting fully from the provisions of the contracts in existence," McCarthy said.

The plan divides the 1,300 civil servants affected into three groups:

—Group one, comprising 30 per cent of the employees, has given up the most and therefore is entitled to the maximum 17 per cent of salary benefits package, McCarthy said. This group cannot bargain collectively, receives no special leave, no overtime or substitution pay, holidays are set at 20 days per year, and and is not restricted to a 35-hour week;

—Group two, 60 per cent of the excluded employees, has given up union security, the right to collective bargaining, payment for overtime, the right to refuse overtime and recourse to a grievance procedure and receives an 11-per-cent package;

—Group three, 10 per cent of the group, has give up union security, the grievance procedure and the right to bargain collectively and receives a three-per-cent package.

The non-union employees can claim up to the first 10 per cent of their award in cash and must choose the remainder from among a list of fringe benefits.

"Identical provisions are in the contracts with other employees covering such things as sick leave, expenses on transfer, travel expenses, medical payments, the death of an employee, and so on," McCarthy said.

She said the B.C. Government Employees Union contract overtime provisions, if applied to the management staff, "would result in tremendous claims because of the long hours worked, long travel hours, including weekends etc. which are, of course, expected in a managerial position."

The plan, McCarthy said, is not secret and copies of the booklet outlining its provisions have been available to the public since July, 1976.

'Inequitable Decisions' Started Police on Warpath

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

What does it take to force policemen across the country to talk of going on strike?

Phil Jamieson, a Saanich corporal who is the new president of the 45,000-member Canadian Police Association, says all it takes is the federal Anti-Inflation Board making disruptive, inequitable decisions.

He was expanding in a recent interview on an association statement earlier this month that the policemen's group will advocate strike action unless the AIB is disbanded.

Jamieson said the AIB's treatment of police forces is the latest example of the poor handling of emergency service employees by governments.

"A lot of the time emergency services are the football of politicians mainly because they don't kick back," he said.

However, the AIB has changed the rules of the game, he says, and if the board continues dealing with police in what the association feels is an inequitable manner, governments will be faced with militant action from their law enforcement officers.

Jamieson recites a litany of percentages and cost of living figures which he says demonstrate how the AIB has destroyed the historical contemporary relationships between neighboring police forces.

As a result, in areas where there were only two wage rates, there may now be as many as a dozen.

What is more aggravating, he says, is that in breaking down these wage relationships, the AIB seems to ignore important factors like economic conditions, crime rates and case loads in the various areas.

As an example of what he is talking about in the Greater Victoria area, Jamieson says police forces in Saanich, Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay settled for virtually the same pay package in 1975.

Saanich signed the contract before the federal guidelines came in but the agreements of the other three forces were subject to review by the AIB, which, late last year, rolled them all back.

The problem is the amount of the roll back varied in each case.

Victoria lost about five per cent, Oak Bay, about seven and Esquimalt police were rolled back seven per cent.

As an aside, Jamieson mentions that some idea of the confusion resulting from the AIB administration can be gleaned from the fact the AIB said police were to pay back in 1976 what they were overpaid in 1975. But by the time that word came down 1976 was over.

JAMIESON
. . . AIB changes rules

As an example of some of the inter-provincial inequalities, he said, Ontario police, traditionally about the fifth highest-paid in the country, received an arbitrated award of 10.65 per cent in 1975.

The AIB rolled that back to 10 per cent.

In Vancouver, which normally has the highest paid police force in Canada, the AIB rolled back a 10.2 award to eight per cent even though the cost of living in Vancouver between October, 1975, and October, 1976, went up 9.3 per cent.

"So here we have a case where the Canada average is six per cent and a force is able to obtain four per cent over the cost of living and another that has not even been able to keep up to the cost of living," Jamieson says.

Even if the AIB had ignored the economic factors, Vancouver should still receive more money because the crime rate is higher and the work load per man in the province is the highest, he added.

"So what's happening is, it doesn't matter how good a job a police force is doing, what its work load is, or what the economic conditions are.

"They (the percentage increases) are all artificially based on a consensus in Ottawa on an average price index."

Jamieson says what the association is trying to get across to the federal government is that if this kind of "arbitrary action" doesn't stop there will be industrial chaos both in the public and private sector.

He said the association does not oppose a fair and equitable system of controls "but what's happened is a bureaucratic nightmare and perhaps the medicine now is far worse than the disease."

Traditionally, he said, police have taken a responsible approach to their job but as a result of the AIB decisions they are identifying more and more with labor's opposition to the controls and are more in favor of using the ultimate weapon, the strike.

"That's not what they want to do . . . but here we have a case of an all-powerful board that appears to be more powerful than provincial legislatures or Parliament itself . . ."

He said police forces have obeyed the law, paid out a large amount of money for the arbitration process — $20,000 for the 100-man Victoria force in gaining a 1975 agreement — and then "this super-arbitrator at the end of the rainbow" cuts the award back.

Jamieson says for all intents and purposes, provincial arbitration procedures are dead.

He says it is time the province, which, according to the Canadian constitution is responsible for policing, should step in and try and clean up some of the mess in its own house.

He said it as if the province has leased out its house and the tenant — the AIB — is chopping holes in the roof and blowing up the furnace.

"It is fine to say, well it's my house but the house is falling down around you."

Jamieson was chosen president of the police association earlier this month. He is also president of the B.C. Federation of Peace officers, which represents the 1,500 municipal and national harbors board police in B.C., and president of the Saanich Police Association.

Bennett Sets Ottawa Huddle

Premier Bill Bennett will go to Ottawa Tuesday to talk with members of the federal cabinet, but his main topic of discussion will be the anti-inflation agreement.

The premier said in an interview Wednesday, he is disappointed with the lack of direction the federal government has shown on when the controls program will end.

He said there is talk of ending the program early, when in December he and the other premiers reached agreement on keeping it going until the end of 1978.

The premier said this uncertainty won't help labor negotiations in the coming year.

Bennett said the federal government altered its position after listening to a pitch from Ontario and Quebec.

The premier has meetings planned with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, Transport Minister Otto Lang, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson, Industry Ministry Jean Chretien, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie and Marcel Lessard, minister of Regional Economic Development.

Bennett told the legislature that British Columbia has six major negotiations with Ottawa under way, incluling northern transportation, coal development and coastal ferries.

Liquor Rip-Off Denied

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister, Rafe Mair denied Wednesday a statement by NDP MLA Alex Macdonald that the price of Scotch whisky is out of line.

Macdonald, the member for Vancouver East, said that with the value of the British pound dropping, the price of Scotch should drop. Instead, he said, the price is going up 20 cents a bottle in April.

Mair said that 90 per cent of the Scotch purchases were made when the pound was valued at $1.88 and denied Macdonald's charge that the Liquor Administration Branch profited when the pound dropped to $1.54.

Mair said that even if a profit had been made when the pound dropped, there is no profit in liquor sales.

Money from liquor sales will go back into the social costs created by liquor, he said.

No Compromise On 'Core' Plan

The provincial government will go ahead with its core curriculum program for public schools despite a $65,000 advertising campaign denouncing it by the British Columbia Teachers Federation, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Wednesday.

"We have made a decision that there will be a core curriculum," McGeer told the legislature, "there will be no compromise on that principle."

McGeer made the statements during debate on a non-confidence motion calling for amendments to the proposed provincial budget.

Under the program, public school students will be obliged to learn certain skills set out by the education ministry.

The ministry will recommend what should be taught "in addition to what must be taught," the minister said.

The minister said the public will be asked for suggestions on what should be taught in schools and "of course there will be changes."

The core curriculum will go into effect next September, McGeer said.

Bill Broadley, president of the teachers' federation, said Tuesday that the BCTF launched the advertising campaign to encourage public discussion of the core curriculum.

Broadley said most teachers agree with the concept in the curriculum but said some are concerned about the potential consequences.

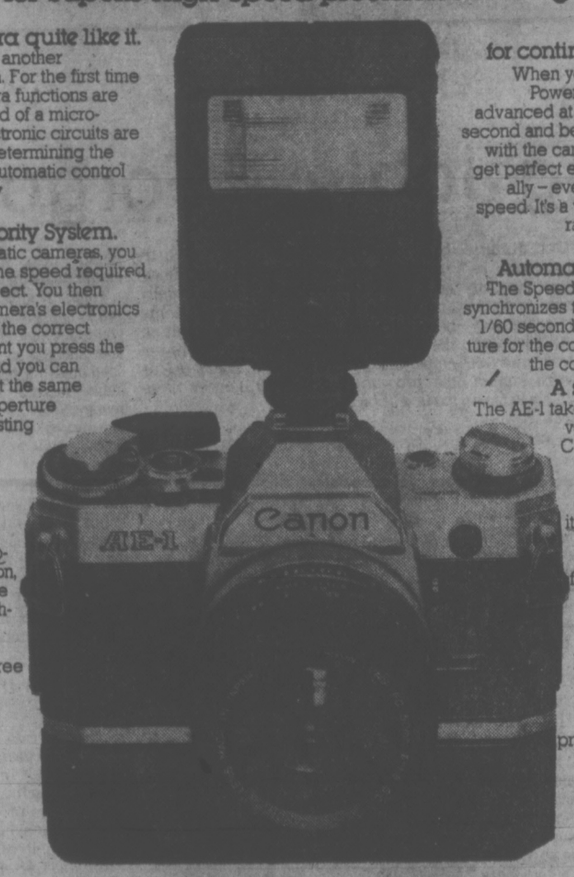
Canon AE-1...the revolutionary "new generation" SLR with electronic circuitry, flash and speed winder for superb high-speed precision shooting.

No other camera quite like it.
The AE-1 is not just another "automatic" camera. For the first time in the world, camera functions are under the command of a microcomputer and electronic circuits are used not only for determining the exposure, but for automatic control of practically every working part.

New Shutter Priority System.
Unlike most automatic cameras, you start by choosing the speed required to "freeze" the subject. You then focus – and the camera's electronics determine and set the correct exposure the instant you press the shutter release! And you can continue to shoot at the same speed – with the aperture automatically adjusting to changing light conditions.

Compact, lightweight, reliable.
Because of its revolutionary construction, electronics replace a great many mechanical parts. This saves weight and means a new degree of reliability and trouble-free operation...in a more compact camera that's easier to handle and operate.



Power Winder for continuous shooting.
When you add the exciting Power Winder, the film is advanced at about 2 frames per second and because it is coupled with the camera's circuitry, you get perfect exposure automatically – even at this incredible speed. It's a whole new world of rapid-fire continuous action shooting.

Automatic Speed Light.
The Speed Light automatically synchronizes the shutter speed at 1/60 second, then sets the aperture for the correct exposure and the correct flash duration.

The AE-1 takes advantage of the vast series of famous Canon FD lenses. It is truly "changing the course of photography" because of its new, higher levels of quality, performance – and the freedom it allows for creativity.

Incredible camera. Incredible price.

Not Quite Out Of Controls

Inflation has not exactly been wrestled to the ground but the Trudeau administration sees an end to wage and price controls early in 1978. Speaking to provincial finance ministers in Ottawa Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the economic situation looks relatively favorable to an end for controls. Roughly translated, this means two things: Chronic complaints from the business community that controls inhibit capital investment and employment are finally getting through in Ottawa. Secondly the Liberals are girding for an election in late 1977 or early 1978.

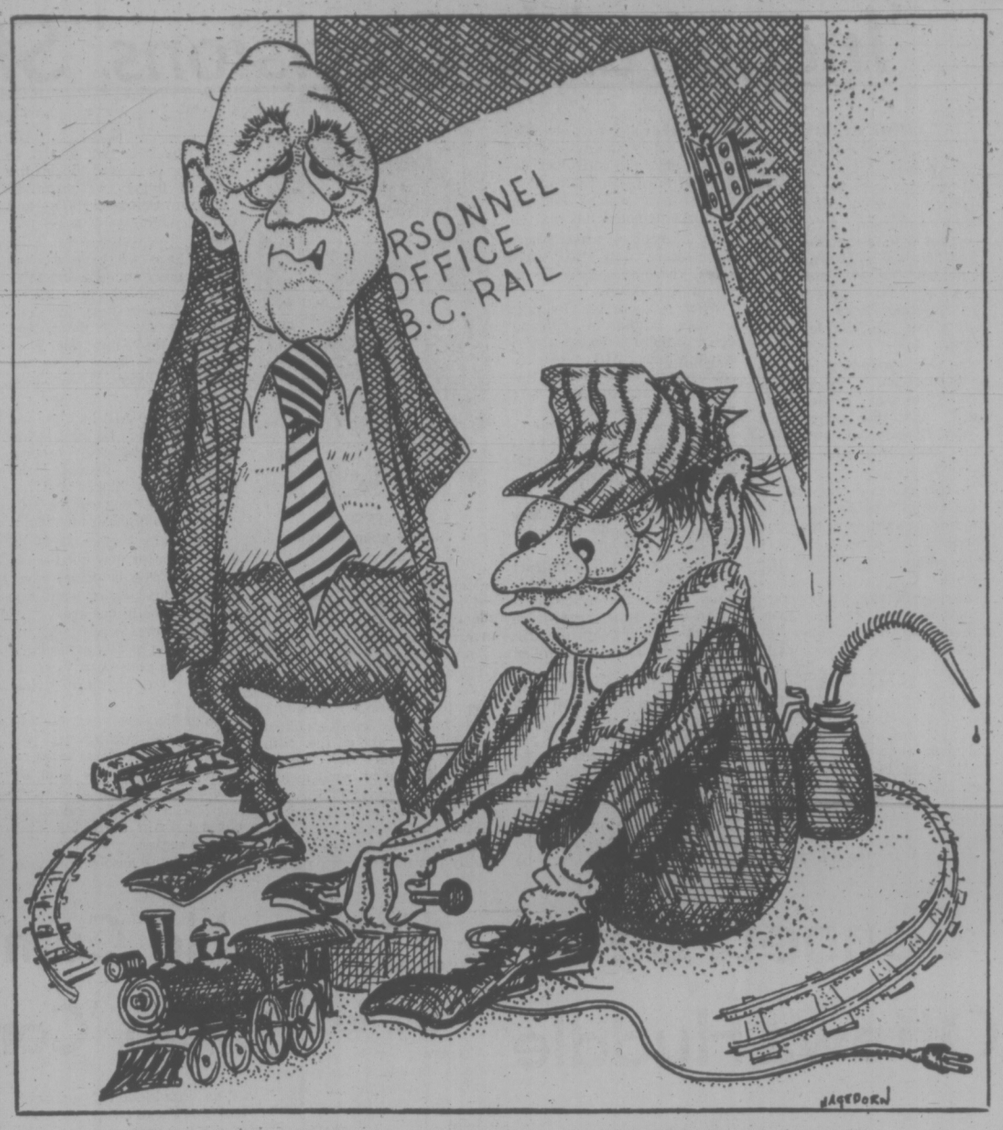
If this logic sounds presumptuous, just look at the provinces that have lined up with Ottawa on an early end to controls. The governments of Ontario and Manitoba are very different ideologically, but they have one thing in common — looming elections. Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough has called for an immediate end to profit controls followed by an early end to wage controls in the private sector. The minority Tory regime in Ontario does not want its NDP opposition to score points on both wage and price guidelines as well as unemployment. In Manitoba the situation is analagous. Premier Ed Schryer needs solid union support — something he hasn't had of late — if he is to defeat the Conservative opposition. As for Quebec's unilateral removal of the teeth in its controls, Rene Levesque is showing the flag to Ottawa and supporting the strong trade unions that gave him good support in the recent election.

In any language, the removal of controls has not been dictated so much by the state of the economy, as by the opportunism of a number of governments looking ahead to the polls. When it comes to maintaining power, governments are without qualms or morals. If any Canadian thinks altruism exists in political parties, this little scene of rank opportunism should forever disabuse him of the notion. Safe from a recent election with 300,000 unionized employees going to the bargaining table this year, British Columbia favors continuing controls. Regardless of motives, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe is correct, the controls should remain. Any thoughts of lifting them should be based on a stronger Canadian economy and a more stable situation in U.S. business.

Federal thinking on controls was observed in a few twitches earlier this week. The Bank of Canada, through a strange process of osmosis which appears to anticipate government thinking, lowered the prime lending rate ½ per cent to 8.5 per cent. Then Macdonald told a Canadian Club audience that profit restraints would soon be loosened to stimulate investment. It is interesting to note here that labor's appeals, the day of so-called protest, and its continuing vocal unhappiness over controls failed to move the government. But that old shibboleth — lack of capital investment — got the pot boiling in a hurry. In fact, there has been a decided lack of capital investment in Canada, not so much because of arduous profit controls as taxation measures, interest rates, and an uncertain economic climate, recently compounded by political events in Quebec.

Price controls were a poor joke from the beginning as any consumer knows. Profit controls were more psychological than physical, although they provided extra business costs in the form of more work for chartered accountants and tax lawyers. Indeed, it must be admitted that wage controls — the only aspect of the program roughly applied — had some effect on the level of inflation. Had controls been more evenly applied to all sectors the current inflation rate might even be manageable. Nevertheless, they will now be phased out according to the expiry dates of union contracts or, in the case of business, at the end of a fiscal year, at least that is the method favored by Ottawa. For the sake of political expediency we are back to boom and bust psychology.

Meanwhile, hints exist that labor will cooperate, and a monitoring group — we went through that process with Beryl Plumptre — will watch both business and labor for excess. It sounds good and it might work. But a free spending U.S. president, and grandiose domestic schemes such as the MacKenzie pipeline, not to mention human greed could easily quicken the inflation spiral's gyrations. The government appears to be adding up the scalps before it unsheathes its knife for the battle.



"... you've amply demonstrated your railway expertise ... how would you like to join the BCR? ..."

Latest Tango in Toyland

"This government is demonstrating its commitment to restraint by presenting a budget which calls for a restrained spending program." So said our Minister of Finance Evan Wolfe in the preface to his budget last week which restored 10 per cent salary cuts to MLAs and cabinet ministers. The commitment to restraint was so pale it resulted, in an 11.11 per cent salary increase for MLAs. Now the government will argue that legislators are simply getting back what they gave up, as a symbol of last year's restraint. But in effect, no matter how you look at it, the hike is above and beyond six per cent increases recommended by the Anti Inflation Board this year.

What is even more infuriating to civil servants is that they have been offered an across the board increase of $423 this year, compared with a $2,400 fait accompli for legislators. Higher echelon civil servants, such as deputy ministers have received the sweetest bonuses this side of heaven. In a sense this push-me-pull-you logic is endemic to the government's financing. The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia borrows $181 million from the government and the next day the government borrows it back. Debts that were in the budget last year are transferred to crown corporations this year. Cut MLA salaries by 10 per cent last year and restore them this year. It's like playing in and out the windows with public money.

As the games are played the Socred caucus sings the Recovery Waltz or dances the fox trot of restraint. Next year we will undoubtedly see the resurgence rhumba. To the lay public it's just more jive. For most British Columbians who make under $24,000 per year the premier's dour statement of last year still holds true: "There is nothing to dance about."

TOM WICKER

Young Jobless Forgotten

NEW YORK — President Jimmy Carter's fiscal stimulus proposals, as presented to congress by budget director Bert Lance, have been expanded to an investment of $31.3 billion over a 20-month period. The plan does not, however, emphasize employment programs as much as Carter had seemed to suggest that it would, and it seems unlikely to have much impact on the most crucial economic problem — youth unemployment.

Lance conceded, moreover, that the stimulus plan represented another retreat under business pressures. The new president reversed himself and included an increase in the investment credit for plant and equipment. The increase in itself may prove useful, but it followed Carter's abandonment of his campaign promise to use wage and price controls if necessary and the reduction of his stated unemployment goals for this year.

Carter's Hedging

In other areas, Carter also has hedged his commitment to appoint federal judges on merit, allowed doubt to develop about his promise to reduce the defence budget by $5 to $7 billion, let it be known that he will delay for another year the imposition of emission standards on new automobiles and disappointed many blacks and women in what they had thought were his commitments to them. That's a lot of backing down for this early in the game.

The investment credit proposal was disappointing in another sense. It was offered as an alternative to the original Carter plan to provide business a five per cent credit against employer payroll taxes — primarily the social security levy. As Lance described the program, a business firm will be able to take either a 12 per cent investment credit (as compared to the present ten per cent) or a four per cent credit against its payroll taxes.

This choice undoubtedly will diminish use of the payroll tax credit, the most innovative of the Carter proposals. By partially relieving employers of the growing burden of their part of the social security tax, the plan ought to encourage additional employment. Since payroll taxes usually are passed directly on to customers, some beneficial effect might have been felt on the price level as well. With fewer employers getting a lesser credit, under the program outlined by Lance, these gains will be diminished.

BERT LANCE
... Carter's budget director

The tax credit for investment, moreover, is a conventional device for fuelling a general economic expansion. Such an expansion is clearly necessary but it is only part of the answer to 7.8 per cent unemployment. About half of all those unemployed are under 25. Many are uneducated, unskilled and inexperienced at any kind of work.

The great bulk of the jobs created by economic expansion therefore will not be available to these young people — most particularly to young blacks in the urban ghetto, whose unemployment rate is officially near 40 per cent and actually higher than that.

Thus, the stimulus program is not focussed as sharply as it might have been on the youth unemployment problem, although it does include $5 to $8 billion in additional spending this year and next, primarily for public service jobs and public works projects. Carter must not have been listening closely to one business executive for whose views he is supposed to have great respect.

"The gut issue for unemployment is the kids, 16 to 20 years old, in centre cities," Irving Shapiro, the chairman of E. I. du-Pont de Nemours and Co., said in an interview with the Associated Press. "These are people who are uneducated, not trained to work, ill-equipped to ever get a job. And even if the economy is strong they'll be unemployed.

Zero In on Young

"You have to zero in on these people and have programs that will train them, get them ready to enter the labor market, and make useful citizens out of them. If you don't we're going to wind up with these people being social misfits for the rest of their lives."

Nor was Carter listening to his impressive new secretary of labor, Ray Marshall. He not only advocated a bigger stimulus at his confirmation hearing, but asserted in the Public Interest Economics Review last September that while "traditional monetary-fiscal policies are important ... they alone clearly will not produce full employment without intolerable levels of inflation ... Selective programs must complement general economic policies in order to achieve reasonable price stability and full employment."

No one is contending, of course, that an emergency stimulus program by itself should produce full employment. Congress appears ready to trim it in the direction of more spending and less tax reduction. The first detailed Carter proposal nevertheless seems off-target, despite its increased size.

Litter

Can nothing be done to reduce the amount of litter and garbage on the sidewalks, boulevards, roads and parks of this once beautiful city? Every park bench, every bus stop, every corner store is surrounded by its attendant raft of decaying candy wrappers, old cigarette packages, yellowing newspapers and used paper tissues. Not so very long ago, on Oliphant Street, in addition to an unsightly collection of paper litter, someone had dropped an old boot and the works of a cockoo clock right in the middle of the sidewalk.

I happen to think that the woman who opened her car window and dropped lunch bags and contents plus two king-size Dixie cups on our "scenic drive," the workman in the battered Volkswagen who dropped the remains of his lunch in a Beacon Hill parking bay and then emptied the contents of a very full ashtray on top before driving off and the kids who finish their milk drinks and then hurl the empty paper cups over the nearest hedge, are all irresponsible.

Unfortunately, their laziness, thoughtlessness and downright dirtiness reflects on all the inhabitants of this city. However, as these people obviously have no civic pride, there's no use appealing to it. Government would be wasting its breath and our tax dollars if it tried to "educate" them. They would only resent it. I think we have to realize that a rather large segment of our society is composed of the immature or the irresponsible and that arrangements have to be made to clean up after it.

Could not the city merchants, schools, churches and other similar institutions, apartment blocks and condominiums, be made responsible for the sidewalks in front of their establishments? Frankly, I would have thought that it would have been a matter of pride to keep the area around one's place of business as clean as possible, but apparently, it just isn't so. Could not the city employ someone to collect the litter in our parks and burn it?

Surely something ought to be done before once beautiful Victoria, which Mr. J. Teskey recently called "the dirtiest city in Canada" in his letter to this newspaper on Jan. 20, becomes more widely known by the same description. — Peter Gage, 308-250 Douglas Street.

Condominiums

Inasmuch as there is little or no choice as to the type of accommodation in Victoria other than a condominium, one should examine and assess the restrictions and inequities embodied in the Strata Titles Act, as this is the legislation to which their residency and ownership is subject. Notwithstanding, it is well to note that the validity of the act is in question, since it infringes on the bill of rights, is inequitable as it subverts the interest of the bona fide owner in favor of the developer.

Obviously, condominium owners should first subscribe to the principle of unanimity of purpose and recognize that the developer and strata lot owner are adversaries in this instance and should pursue a positive stance, by insisting that the minister responsible for the administration of the act (a) recognize the true concept of condominium residency and ownership, rather than destroying it and, (b) protect the strata lot owner by requiring the developer to submit with his plans, guarantees (not for a few months, as is presently the case) but for an extended period, together with a performance bond, related to the value of the complex, and most importantly, provide means to cancel a purchase, and recover the purchase price, if the prospectus supporting the sale of the strata lots has misrepresented the facts. Failing this, the minister is manifestly serving the developer at the expense of the individual, and confirms the oft repeated charge that "big business has the Socreds in their pocket." — J. A. Roberts, 214-1149 Rockland Avenue.

Editorial Challenged

Perhaps you will think it bold that one of your readers shall dare to challenge your editorial on succession duties of Jan. 28. Well, by coincidence, on page 12 of the same newspaper a little CP article Manitoba: No Place to Die is providing part of the answer, with not much room to elaborate.

In the first place, the elimination of succession duties will keep in this province many elderly people with means, and attract others not exactly in need of social assistance. These people do pay substantial federal and provincial income taxes, taxes which make it possible for senior and provincial governments to carry on many programs which benefit education, health, welfare and so on. The wealthy class also makes use of many goods and services that contribute to employment and this, together with the seven per cent sales tax, maintains a reasonable prosperity and more than makes up for the loss of the $25.5 million (the figure is quoted from the editorial so I can't tell whether it is exact or not) which the succession duties will bring to the province.

Under the previous socialist regime, British Columbia welcomed many people who flocked here from all over Canada to take advantage of the government's (taxpayers') largesse.

Now, it is right to welcome among us wealthy people attracted here by the natural beauty and the climate of this wonderful province. These people will buy homes, pay taxes, make demands on many services, thus providing more jobs and more taxpayers. This may not be a Robin Hood philosophy, but the fact is that, directly and indirectly, everyone is better off when in a human society a small part of it has to "share" what it possesses with the whole of that society; to share mainly by taxation. Compare, for instance, the Swiss society with any other in Europe or elsewhere and I believe you will reach the same conclusions.—E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Discrimination

We applaud the action of Terri Durshel in refusing to submit to the humiliating treatment by city council in relation to her application for the position of city clerk.

Do the honorable councillors believe the citizens of Victoria so naive that they will not recognize the procrastination and devious ploys of the city administration in true perspective — blatant discrimination?

City council has apparently allowed an "unqualified, incompetent" person to serve as acting city clerk for two months since the retirement of the city clerk. Prior to Nov. 30, this same person was permitted to perform the duties of city clerk for periods up to two months in his absence due to vacations and illness. Then the city council had the audacity to propose that this "unqualified, incompetent" employee continue as acting city clerk for a further six to nine months, after rejecting her application for the position of city clerk.

In 1972 this office had four staff members — city clerk, assistant city clerk, a secretary and a stenographer. When the assistant left the secretary was promoted to class two, given a salary increase of $27 per month, and carried virtually all the duties of the former assistant, but was denied the title and salary of the position.

How could the city administration get away with this? Was it because this was a woman? After all, $400 a month was a good salary — for a woman — wasn't it?

For seven months Terri Durshel discharged these responsibilities which included taking over five committees. After repeated protests her responsibilities were reduced somewhat, but no promotion was forthcoming; and five years later, with a greatly increased workload, this same employee was judged unworthy of appointment to city clerk. Since Dec. 1, this office has been operating with two full-time and one part-time employee.

Are the honorable councillors aware that there is a human rights code of British Columbia presently in effect:

"Sec. 6(1) No employer shall discriminate between his male and female employees by employing an employee of one sex for any work at a rate of pay that is less than the rate of pay at which an employee of the other sex is employed by that employer for similar or substantially similar work.

"Sec. 8(1) Every person has the right of equality of opportunity based upon bona fide qualifications in advancement or promotion.

"Sec. 8(2) For the purposes of subsection (1) (b) the sex of any person shall not constitute reasonable cause unless it relates to the maintenance of public decency."

Could that be the loophole? Would it be indecent to have a female city clerk? — Ella Brett, 4-285 Michigan Street; Elizabeth Clement, 1568 Westall Street; Jean Mohart, 2944 Wascana Street; Nora Jane Rowe, 305-25 Government Street.

Common Sense

Are there no members of the Rene Levesque party who have a modicum of common sense? To split Canada is certainly not common sense. It is playing the game of divide and conquer. Wake up Quebec. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

All the Politicians Get is Scorn and Neglect

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN
London Observer

Politicians are out. They are barely accepted socially in intelligent circles. If they do venture among their betters, they are apt to be bully-ragged at the dinner table as if they were escaped canaries caught by a flock of starlings. It is rapidly becoming a question of "Would you want your daughter to marry one?"

Now this is not a grand tour d'horizon of the world's democracies and of their patronizing contempt for their own once sacred machinery. But this applies in varying degrees to all countries where they have elected assemblies, new or old. It applies to Japan. It applies to the more sophisticated countries of Eastern Europe. Poland glories in its contempt almost as if it were a freedom.

Possibly Britain is an extreme example, though some countries like Australia have made a way of life out of creative disrespect and will allow no heroes unless they be men who, fairly or foully, have beaten the system.

But in Britain, where once to be prime minister was the apex of possible ambition, admiration and respect and trust have been withdrawn. There have always been hard words for the oppostition, but never before have the various men — in the street, in the pub, in the pew, at the work bench, in the club, behind the wheel, up on the roof or down in the mine and all their female partners or equivalents — never has the generality of citizens been so dismissive of their elected representatives.

As for the leaders whose solemn duty it is to "advise the queen," i.e., run the country, you would find it hard to get a good word for any of them from connoisseurs of political integrity.

There is no virtue in his. It is not a sign of sophistication. The Greeks evolved the word "Idiot" and it meant simply a private man, one who took no interest in politics.

In Britain, according to the pollsters, it is now widely accepted that the reality of power lies with the trade union leaders. These in their turn are seen as subject not to the will of the majority of their membership, but to that of their hard-core activists.

And while we are on the Greek kick, this means the rule of the few, an oligarchy and by no possible stretch of the political imagination the rule of the best, which is what an aristocracy is meant to be and which is of course an unattainable ideal since aristocrats, though historically interesting and of good bloodstock, are only occasionally the best available.

The activists inside and outside the unions, whether they be of the extreme left or right, the new nationalists, too, of course, have this in common: they all despise the individuals, the system, the rituals that compose government and the upper reaches of the law and, often, of the church. But these addicts and activists are of their nature a minority.

The middle classes who, at least proportionately, have suffered most from the crisis of capitalism, have all but opted out. You could not just now blow their sullen smoke into any sort of flame. The mass of the skilled and unskilled workers who did not bother with union elections feel almost as detached — except when their immediate interests are concerned.

The whole world, including the Vatican, has at present a curiously leaderless look. It may be an accident. It is certainly not the function of a democracy to throw up great leaders. Britain was fortunate in the nineteenth century. In this century's two world wars it produced Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. Maybe the nation has for a while expended its ration of greatness.

But this crisis, and particularly Britain's deadly version of it, is a slow and creeping thing, it is not the sort that summons up inherent greatness, either among the politicians or within the nation.

The political commentators bravely continue their dissection of the "leaders," but it is an intellectual, almost reflex action. They have to use a good deal of mockery to collect an audience. Politicians cannot collect audiences at all. No one really expects them to solve problems. Few are expecting a man on a white horse to save the economy. The British are keeping their heads down and waiting it out.

Foreign commentators tend, in the face of the intertia, to predict some form of disguised dictatorship. The same has been said of France. But though people may be angry, they seem to be able to manage at the same time not to be interested. And just now there appears to be no cure for this disease.

Of course a dramatic economic turn for the better or the worse might get the political adrenalin flowing again. But there is no certainty of that.

The future will look back at this period as a time of bottomless boredom. But boredom with politics does not engender a sense of crisis. It is of its nature soporific.

Yet long nights do end. And sleeping beauties do awake. The only question is — what kiss from what sort of prince is going to wake up this vast and slightly seedy sleeper?

Loan Sharks Devour Chile

By JAMES NEILSON

SANTIAGO — Chile's military regime has been stung by a series of bankruptcies and frauds in the free-wheeling financial markets of the country into doing something to bring them under control.

For the last two and a half years, Chile has been a paradise for loan sharks and asset strippers, rentiers and bucket-shop operators, and many sharp individuals have got rich quick.

Thousands of others, however, have been ruined, and it was their clamor for retribution that has finally persuaded the government of Gen. Augusto Pincohet to start imposing some kind of discipline on the anarchic world of Chilean finance.

Went Broke

The bell began to toll for excessive financial freedom at the end of 1976, when a well-known "savings and loan cooperative" calling itself La Familia went broke.

The young men who put La Familia together just over a year ago did not set out to swindle their clients. They hoped to make a lot of money in a short time by taking advantage of the hunger for security and inflation-beating schemes of middle-class Chileans, and the equally intense hunger for loans that has seized industry and commerce.

The shortage of money in Chile these days is so great that anyone who has it can send it forth to multiply without much difficulty, and anyone who wants to borrow it, whether to buy a house or establish a major industry, must reconcile himself to paying enormous interest rates. La Familia took in money at about 9 per cent a month, just like the other makeshift finance companies that have mushroomed in Chile since the government gave the go-ahead in June, 1974, and loaned it out again at 12 or 13 per cent a month.

The new "financiers" — who differed from loan sharks only in that their business was on the whole perfectly legal — prospered wonderfully.

The investors, small and not so small, who let the financial companies use their money had no cause for complaint either. Chile's inflation rate is now running at about 5 per cent a month — for all of 1976 it was in the region of 174 per cent — and they were earning 9 or 10 per cent a month: anyone with over $1,000 could live quite comfortably on the interest. Many people did.

Most financial companies spread their credits around, but La Familia did not. It gave 40 per cent of its capital to one single firm, and when that firm went under it dragged La Familia down with it.

La Familia overstretched itself at the wrong moment and lost its gamble. Had the firm it loaned so much of its capital to survived another couple of months La Familia might have been big enough by then to sustain the loss. Other operations have taken equal or greater risk and have profited mightily.

Chile's speculative orgy began in 1974 when the military dictatorship, inspired by the free enterprise theories of Prof. Milton Friedman, decided to do away with most of the complicated regulations handed down from Salvador Allende's Marxist government and its Christian Democrat predecessor. Under these governments, financial dealings had been regarded as suspect on principle, and the result had been a luxuriant state bureaucracy that had succeeded in clogging up the Chilean economy.

Black Market

Pinochet, fired by the eloquence of his young economic advisers, decided to do away with it all. A set of reasonable regulations were left in force, but the legislation had been hastily drawn up and there were plenty of gaps.

Chilean businessmen and speculators were, moreover, like their brethren in the rest of Latin America, accustomed to spending as much of their time working the black market as going according to the book: they would not have survived as businessmen had they not been; and they systematically abused the extra freedom they were given.

PINOCHET . . . reverses policy

Steps are now being taken to restore some order to the chaos, to protect the people who merely want to husband their money in a broken-backed economy in which three-digit inflation can destroy a modest fortune, and to dampen down the sort of speculation practiced by La Familia and other financial companies.

The government has promised to put malefactors in jail and to subject all the companies to far closer scrutiny. And President Pinochet himself announced this month that the government would pay back those who lost their money in savings and loan companies that went bankrupt.

The ceiling on the government guarantee is only $2,800, however, — small comfort to one Jose Cardenas, whose plight has become a symbol of the feverishly speculative nature of Chilean finance.

Jose, a carpenter who had struggled for years to keep his head above water in depression-ravaged Chile, won the halfmillion dollar first prize on the football lottery last September.

He was rich but, naturally enough, wanted to become richer, as he heard lots of other people were managing to do, so he put almost all his money into La Familia.

Now Jose is back at his bench, much sadder but not much wiser. Like the others who have lost their money he is not quite sure what hit him.

The success of the finance companies — and if profits are the criteria the great majority must be accounted roaring successes — has been at the expense of the banks, as well as industry and commerce. Of the twelve commercial banks in Chile only three showed a profit last year. The other nine were all in the red, and the fact that the announcement of this was made at the end of the year, just when the collapse of some finance companies was sending waves of panic through Santiago, did nothing to restore serenity to the minds of Chilean savers.

Manitoba Dentists Say Ouch

By ROGER NEWMAN

WINNIPEG — Manitoba dentists have learned in the past year that professional groups cannot ignore their public relations in today's society.

Twelve months ago the 375-member Manitoba Dental Association called a press conference to announce an increase in dentists' fees in the province. But, when reporters arrived, officials of the association steadfastly refused to divulge the amount of the raise.

Citizen reaction to this bit of high-handedness was almost unanimously unfavorable. The dentists — who have been battling Manitoba's NDP government over terms and extent of a new provincial denticare plan — discovered quickly their silence had damaged the profession's standing with the public.

Since the infamous press conference incident, the province has proceeded to set up a children's dentistry program, without paying undue heed to representations of dentists. So the association decided not to repeat last year's mistake when it recently unveiled 1977 fee increases.

The result is that, for the first time, Manitobans have been given a clear indication of how much they are paying for dental work. In making the 1977 announcement, Dr. Neville Winograd, chairman of the MDA's economics committee, said dentists' fees in Manitoba will immediately rise an average of 4.23 per cent for 47 different procedures, with the increases ranging from a maximum of 8 per cent to zero at the bottom of the scale.

Due to the association's new disclosure policy, a patient now knows that it costs $9.20 if a dentist just looks into his mouth, compared with $9 last year. The charge for a complete oral examination has increased to $24.60 from $24.

Despite their efforts to be frank, the dentists are not yet out of the woods from a public relations standpoint. They still refuse to reveal the extent of their 1976 fee increase. Their association has also told reporters that details on the average incomes of Manitoba dentists are "classified information." Furthermore, the MDA is charging $12 a copy to members of the public who ask to buy the dentists' 1977 fee guide.

There is even some question whether dentists can legally issue a fee schedule. Under recent changes in the federal Combines Investigation Act, a possibility exists that professional associations could be charged with price-fixing if they adopt such a schedule. However, no prosecutions are likely to be launched until the completion of a current court case in which the Ontario Medical Association is testing the combines legislation.

Manitoba's dentists, meanwhile, say that their association's schedule is only a "guide" and that adherence to it is strictly voluntary. According to MDA spokesmen, 70 per cent of the province's dentists charge according to the association's recommendations, while 15 per cent charge more and the remaining 15 per cent less than the guide.

Dentists further say their increases in both 1976 and 1977 fall well within Ottawa's anti-inflation guidelines. They claim they need more money to cope with the rising cost of living.

The dentists' present troubles are an example of what happens to professions when they fail to level with the public. At the moment, Manitoba's government is running a free denticare program for 1,400 6-year-olds in selected school districts, plus providing emergency treatment for any child up to 13 years old. Dentists are unhappy about some aspects of the program and fear that it may eventually be extended into full adult denticare.

Government officials deny they have any intention of making the program available to adults.

TV in Legislature: It Works

By NORMAN WEBSTER
The Globe and Mail

Hey, Ottawa! Hey, Quebec! Stop worrying. No, not about Confederation — keep on worrying about that. But honestly and truly the great monster of television is not as fearsome as you think. If you let it within the sacred portals of your assemblies, the earth will not move.

That, at least, has been the Ontario experience. The TV cameras were on hand throughout last year's session of the Legislature, and the big news is: no news.

The place has not been turned into a three-ring circus (no more than usual, anyway). The boobs and the rubes have not been more in evidence. No one plays to the cameras. No one has risen on a point of privilege to denounce the editing of TV film. Most members seem almost unaware the cameras are rolling.

In sum, television has changed nothing. It is just there. Democracy has survived the challenge of the public being able to see what actually takes place in the Legislature. It might survive even in Ottawa and Quebec.

An interesting thing about the entry of TV into the Ontario House is the quiet way in which the members assented to it. It happened just over a year ago. Just before Christmas there was a quiet debate and then — zip — without one dissenting vote, TV was in.

Damned if they haven't done it again this year. Just before the House rose last month, there was another quiet debate and quick adoption of a package of rules and procedures that could significantly alter the way politics is played in Ontario.

Basically the new rules strengthen the role of the private member vis-a-vis the government.

Most important, it will now be possible for private members to bring in bills and see them become law. Heretofore, private members' hour has been a bit of a joke, a chance for backbenchers to let off steam, but nothing else. MPPs' bills were not allowed to come to a vote.

Beginning next session, they may. Members will take part in a draw, and those whose names are picked will be able to bring in a bill or resolution of their choosing. Two will be debated each week, or approximately 50 in the legislative year.

They won't necessarily come to a vote. A vote on second reading — approval in principle — may be blocked if one-third of the members of the Legislature (42) object in advance in writing, or if at least 20 stand in their places and object. In the absence of either veto, a vote will be taken.

This may not sound like much, but in fact it is revolutionary. It breaks the government's lock on legislation. It means that a sensible, well-thought-out bill from a private member may proceed to a full vote of the Legislature on its merits. If passed, it will then go on to committee and third reading and become law.

The legislative experts at Queen's Park don't know of another parliament that is so progressive. In Britain, for example, all it takes is a single nay to block a private member's bill.

There will be one restriction. None of the bills may involve public spending, which is a prerogative still reserved to the government. But this leaves a lot of scope. There are plenty of things that can be accomplished by regulatory action.

The new procedure imposes a responsibility on the lucky members chosen by ballot. They will have to come up with "positive" rather than "negative" legislation, bills which have a good chance of being accepted. To do otherwise is to blow the rare chance to really accomplish something.

What's a positive bill? Well, for example, seatbelt legislation is something that might have come via the private member's route a year or two ago. Michael Cassidy's bill to impose spending limits on municipal elections is a possibility. If the government doesn't move soon on freedom-of-information legislation, some MPP might.

It's a new world for the MPP. It should be a better one.

. . . BUT FEW ATTEND DEBATE IN SENATE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate's campaign to save Confederation opened Wednesday in a two-thirds empty chamber where a Newfoundland senator denounced separatists as a self-centred, selfish and arrogant lot.

Liberal Eric Cook, 67, a retired solicitor from St. John's, told the Senate that independence for Quebec would be "an unmitigated disaster" for Quebecers and Canadians in other parts of the country.

Newfoundland would abruptly terminated the important agreement to supply cheap electric power from Churchill Falls, Labrador to Hydro Quebec, he said.

Further, Quebecers would be foolish to think that Newfoundland will yield an inch of land in the Quebec-Labrador boundary dispute.

Senator Cook, a director of the Bank of Montreal and Maritime Assurance Co., opened a debate on national unity after Senator Raymond Perrault, government leader in the Senate, said last month the Senate would mount an organized campaign against separatism.

Opportunist Fear Cited

OTTAWA (CP) — Andre Ouellet, top federal Liberal strategist in Quebec, says he fears "political opportunists" in provincial governments will take advantage of the Quebec separatism threat to demand more power at the expense of the federal government.

The 37-year-old minister, who took charge of the Liberal political forces in Quebec, said some provincial governments will have to "stop playing games with Ottawa."

OTTAWA (CP) — Former defence minister James Richardson says Canada cannot attempt to keep Quebec in Confederation by locking bilingualism into the constitution.

The Liberal MP for Winnipeg South said in an interview Wednesday he will continue to fight rigid constitutional proposals of Prime Minister Trudeau which would make French the second official language forever by giving Quebec veto in an amending formula.

He said the whole country, including Quebec, must have the future opportunity to choose national unilingualism — meaning English — and that English is becoming the language of communication in Canada and the world.

PROFIT MOTIVE HIT

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Solicitor-General Francis Fox has called for an end to "the balance-sheet approach" as an argument against Quebec's separation from the rest of Canada.

Speaking at a federal Liberal party dinner on Wednesday, he urged supporters of Confederation to "foster a sense of identification" between Quebec and the rest of the country.

The concept of "profitable federalism" was the "most pernicious" creation of the former provincial Liberal government, because "it intimates to both sides that Quebec is in Confederation only as long as it pays."

Fox echoed Prime Minister Trudeaus' recent statements that the Canadian constitution might be modified to some extent.

But, he played down the notion that the federal government must necessarily transfer more powers to the provinces.

He criticized Quebecers who support the idea of an 11th province, which would create a largely English-speaking entity within Quebec territory.

"Those Canadians have given up in despair and without cause," Fox said, adding that the responsibility for this attitude belongs "at the doorstep of Mr. Levesque himself."

He also repeated Trudeau's call for an early referendum on separation to end uncertainty affecting the provinces' economy.

Drop Reactor Deal, Douglas Urges House

CDC RAISES $60 MILLION

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corporation has raised $60 million in U.S. funds through a private placement of income debentures with a number of Canadian financial institutions.

The income debentures will mature in seven years, the Vancouver-based federal corporation announced.

"CDC was formed to develop strong Canadian controlled and managed corporations and currently is investigating a number of projects," the corporation said in a news release. "Pending longer-term investment, the proceeds will be added to other cash resources of the corporation."

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should drop a $400 million nuclear reactor deal with Argentina unless mysterious payments to unknown agents who promoted the sale can be properly explained, T. C. Douglas said Wednesday.

Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) his party's energy spokesman, urged the government to scrap the deal unless it was told who received $2.4 million in agent fees.

Taxpayers would save $25 million if the deal was dropped, he added, referring to an estimated loss resulting from inflation-boosted costs for nuclear materials.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie recoiled at the suggestion.

He asked Douglas whether he wanted Canada to risk a $400 million order and "thousands" of Canadian jobs.

"We could be sued," he said.

J. Lorne Gray, president of government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) when the sale was negotiated, told a Commons public accounts committee investigation recently that he has no idea who received the $2.4 million in agent fees.

The money was paid through a Swiss bank by AECL's partner in the deal, the Italian company Italimpianti. That company refuses to say who received the money.

Douglas urged the energy minister to press Italimianti and the head of the Swiss bank involved in the deal for the names of the agents.

Mr. Gillespie replied that the government supports efforts by the Commons public accounts committee to find out the identity of the Argentine agent, but suggest it would be improper for the government to ask a Swiss bank directly for information.

Times News Services

AYLMER, Que. — Streets were jammed, facilities overcrowded and emotions high here Wednesday night as more than 2,000 federalists held a rally to oppose Quebec separation from Canada.

Officials of Quebec-Canada — an organization dedicated to Quebec remaining in Confederation — were overwhelmed by the response.

More than 1,000 memberships were sold after the rally at $2 each and other rallies were being planned.

Jacques Crepeau, defeated Union Nationale candidate in the region, and Michel Gratton, Gatineau member of the National Assembly were the main speakers, heard by 1,000 people jammed into the main hall, 300 in the Canadian Legion hall next door and 200 in the town hall council chamber as well as hundreds on the streets.

The speeches were short and the whole affair lasted but an hour as the audience, in this town just across the river from Ottawa in Gratton's riding, was regaled with a flow of faith in Canada.

Gratton said he was overwhelmed at the turnout and said if the movement spread through Quebec, as is hoped, then "Rene Levesque has problems."

An observer noted wryly that if the movement does catch on it won't harm Gratton's political image and standing in the Quebec Liberal party.

There was no elaborate defences of Confederation, just a call for anti-separatists and the uncommitted to "stand up for Canada."

"The silent majority cannot remain thus," Gratton told the people, "tonight was the first shout; let's be heard from now on."

He insisted that the movement was going to be "non-partisan" even though he could not change the fast that he was a Liberal. It would not turn into a political party nor would it become elitist.

In the debate leading up to the referendum, he said, there was strength in numbers and the movement should be "just a good bunch of Quebecers who believe in their status as Canadians."

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A poll of Ontario people living in an affluent middle class federal constituency in the Golden Triangle area overwhelmingly declared they would be prepared to grant more concessions to Quebec to persuade that province to remain in confederation.

Eighty per cent of those replying to the poll said they wanted to see Quebec remain part of Canada and that they were prepared to make concessions.

The poll was taken among his constituents by Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo Cambridge).

He sent out the questionnaire before the Christmas recess of parliament and has now tabulated the results.

"I had been getting a lot of telephone calls and letters from people who suggested they were quite prepared to send Quebec packing out of confederation. This worried me and I wondered how widely this opinion was held and whether it was representative of my constituency.

"I now find that it is not representative. Less than 20 per cent of those who answered wanted Quebec out. I think this is important to establish across the country if we are going to have a meaningful debate over the Quebec and separation issue," Saltsman said Wednesday.

He reported the findings of his poll to the NDP caucus and has strongly recommended that each member of the caucus undertake to go along with him in conducting another poll.

This second survey would be to determine what concessions Canadians outside Quebec are prepared to make to keep Quebec a part of Canada.

In light of the "deep concern" shown by the majority in his constituency to keep Quebec Saltsman said he wants now to determine the nature of the concessions they are willing to make. He wants to ascertain the kind of cost the public is prepared to bear to keep confederation intact.

To that end he is now drafting questions for a second survey of his riding.

He would like to see it sent to all constituencies in the country outside of Quebec.

He is proposing to the NDP caucus that at least the 16 members circulate the second survey in their ridings in order to get a broader sample of Canadian opinion.

Bands Get Marching Orders . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Safety Council issued a word of warning Wednesday to marching bands with a railway crossing on their route.

"If your band has to cross a level crossing, stop the music . . . and do not resume playing until every member of the band has cleared the area."

Better still, the council advised, if there is a route that avoids level crossings, take it.

The warning follows a report that a marching band, trapped on a railway crossing, escaped an oncoming train just in time at Kitchener, Ont., last fall after band music drowned out rail warning signals.

Apparently, the 135-member Burlington Teen Tour Band from Burlington, Ont., was marching in Kitchener's Oktoberfest parade when it approached a wide level crossing.

The band suddenly found itself trapped on the tracks as the automatic gates dropped with a train approaching.

Band members managed to scatter to safety before the train reached the crossing.

Bosses Urge Pay Control

VANCOUVER(CP) — In a brief titled Decontrol and Beyond . . . Some Suggestions for Action the Employers Council of British Columbia calls for the removal of the federal anti-inflation program through the use of decontrol legislation.

The submission to federal finance minister Donald Macdonald says that only decontrols can avert a wage explosion that would wipe out whatever gains have been achieved by the federal wage and price controls program.

The council's submission states that a post-control program, presented for public debate before finalization, is imperative.

The submission was made in response to a government call for input from the private sector in helping the government from its post-control policies and decisions.

The brief says a post-control program should contain three elements:

A balance of collective bargaining powers in which employers can resist inflationary wage demands while providing wage increases consistent with productivity and cost-of-living changes;

More effective methods of consultation with government in policy formulation;

And greater discipline in government spending.

The council says legislation to ensure retention of gains made during the controls period would include measures to:

—prevent the restoration of increases in wages and prices rolled back during the control period;

—prevent retroactive application of post-controls agreements;

—disallow contract clauses that terminate an agreement when controls are lifted and those providing for additional increases after the expiration of the program;

—and redress "any existing substantial deviations in the balance of power between unions and management."

The brief also recommends that public sector wage increases be related to comparable increases in the private sector.

"We recommend that a commitment be made by all levels of government . . . to gradually reduce government expenditures as a percentage of GNP," says the brief. "The initial target should be a gradual reduction by five percentage points, or to approximately thirty-seven per cent."

The brief concludes by recommending that a Royal Commission with a mandate similar to that of the 1937 Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations (the Rowell-Sirois commission) be set up.

The council says "a growing and unconscionable amount of time and effort is being wasted in an attempt to respond to problems at the federal-provincial government level which could not have been foreseen 30 years ago."

It says this is of particular relevance in view of the desires of the new Quebec government and the economic demands of some other provinces.

Edmonton Fire Probe Under Way

EDMONTON (CP) — Fire investigators began digging through ashes and rubble Wednesday for clues to the cause of a spectacular two-alarm fire which leveled an entire downtown block Tuesday night.

"It's going to be a major job to determine the cause of the fire," said Capt. Tom Marsden, chief of fire investigations.

Heavy equipment might have to be used to move some of the refuse and caved-in roof structures, he added.

No one was injured in the fire, which damaged eight businesses, and apparently started at the back of the buildings.

Dolores Gaylard, one of the five owners of the retail block, said early reports that damage from the fire could reach $2 million were only guesses because it was too early to determine what totaf losses will be. The block was insured.

Group Forces Sewer Vote

NANAIMO — Nanaimo will vote in March or April on a $15 million sewer and water loan bylaw.

The vote was forced by the Concerned Citizens Committee which collected enough names on a petition calling for the vote.

A total of 1,131 names were needed to force the vote and City Hall counted 1,198.

RENE LEVESQUE: THE FIRE WITHIN

He's a lonely man, a symbol of politica. integrity who is driven by a dream of an independent Quebec. Last November he shocked the country with an election victory that could make that dream a reality. He's René Lévesque, Quebec's 31st premier, who may become its first president. In a specially commissioned article, the February issue of Reader's Digest profiles the man who wants to take Quebec out of Confederation. WALLACE
. . . against budget

Non-Confidence Defeated

A non-confidence motion in the Social Credit government was defeated by a vote of 26 to 16 Wednesday night with Conservative leader Scott Wallace supporting the official opposition.

The motion, the second introduced by the NDP since the current session began Jan. 13, criticized the budget proposed by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe last week for failing "to make provision for the fiscal and human betterment of the majority of the people of the province, particularly in respect to taxation, investor confidence, and employment opportunities."

After more than a day of debate on the amendment with no comments offered by the government. Premier Bill Bennett Tuesday accepted an opposition challenge for cabinet members to voice their objections to the motion.

Cabinet ministers attacked the NDP, repeating old campaign slogans from the 1975 general election which saw the defeat of the NDP.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said his department has embarked on several new programs designed to reverse undesireable trends set by the former NDP administration.

He said the Mincome program, set up by the NDP to guarantee a minimum income for the elderly and handicapped, was launched without adequate assurance from the federal government that Ottawa would provide continual financial assistance.

Many more benefits could have been provided had the NDP carried out proper negotiations with the federal government.

The NPD, in power from 1972 to 1975, introduced budgets which "increased tremendously" each year to improve and add to the number of social programs.

There were lots of programs under the NDP administration, he said, but few returns.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen accused the NDP of trying to weaken the economy to gain control over people.

He said the government of former premier Dave Barrett drove businesses out of the country and then preyed upon the physically and mentally handicapped to further its political goals.

The budget introduced by Wolfe last week is "designed to offer the people of B.C. responsibility in the spending of their money," he said.

B.C. Plans Heritage Fund

Premier Bill Bennett said Wednesday that given an acceptable growth rate in the coming fiscal year, a heritage fund comprised of revenues from non-renewable resources will be established in B.C.

Bennett, making his first speech in the current session of the legislature, said it is folly to keep spending with no regard for the future.

The premier, speaking during debate on an NDP non-confidence motion in the Social Credit government's budget, said that currently, revenues from non-renewable resources help pay for social services.

"That's no fair," said Bennett, adding the government has a responsibility to provide funds for future generations.

He said details of the formula under which the fund would be collected would be revealed later.

NOTED SOPRANO GIVES RECITAL

BENNETT

Native Vancouverite soprano Anne Bennett, now a resident of Victoria, will pay tribute to her new home in her first full recital here, by performing the song cycle, Five Lyrics of the T'ang Dynasty, by Victoria-born composer, John Beckwith.

The recital takes place Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. The timing is unfortunate in that it coincides exactly with the appearance with Victoria Symphony of the great Metropolitan basso, Giorgio Tozzi.

Ms. Bennett has been a frequent performer at the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts where she was enrolled for the past two summers She has continued studies in Vancouver during the past year with Canadian mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing and in Victoria has been working on her final year of study for her ARCT diploma with local teacher-composer Jean Ethridge. She is also a member of Amity Singers.

In addition to the 1947 composition by Beckwith who is Dean of the Music Faculty at University of Toronto, Ms. Bennett's program will include songs by Purcell, Quilter, Barber and Ives as well as the first five songs of the Fauenliebe und Leben cycle by Schumann.

She will be assisted at the piano by Victoria Conservatory of Music senior student Janet Pennington. Gallery doors will open at 2 p.m. The concert is free but donations will be accepted.

$10,000 Grant Awarded Kaleidoscope

One of the largest grants made to a children's theatre group — $10,000 — has been awarded by the Canada Council to Victoria's Kaleidoscope Theatre.

In a letter accompanying announcement of the award, Canada Council theatre section head, David Peacock, states: "This initial grant from the theatre section was recommended in recognition of the initiative Kaleidoscope has shown over the last two years in bringing professional and original theatre to children across Vancouver Island. Council is also particularly pleased to encourage Kaleidoscope's efforts to develop original and relevant material for children's theatre."

Silver Coin Issued

ROME (Reuter) — The Italian treasury said Wednesday it will issue a 500-lire (66-cent) silver coin to commemorate the fifth centenary of the birth of Michelangelo, the Renaissance sculptor, painter and architect born in 1475.

Kaleidoscope directors are delighted by the grant and also elated about the reception Kaleidoscope got at the recent Western Association of Drama Educators' conference at Naramata, B.C.

Director Elizabeth Gorrie and the actors conducted workshops and performed their three touring productions — The Legend of the Minotaur, The Snow Goose and Have You Met the Friends in Your Backyard — during the three days of the conference and received standing ovations.

After each performance board member Molly Phillips, acting as booking agent, was kept solidly busy with the result that Kaleidoscope has had to extend its current tour of B.C. schools a full month to the end of May.

Gov't Studies Porno Ports

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — In an effort to clamp down on the flow of obscene and pornographic books, films and magazines into Canada from American distributors, trucks transporting such material may be restricted to only two or three ports of entry.

National Revenue Minister Monique Begin said today such ports of entry could be confined to British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec. She said the "useful suggestion" was made to her this week by an inter-denominational group of church leaders from Toronto.

She is studying the suggestion. There may be problems involved as it has yet to be determined what the transportation patterns for the pornographic material are, although it is believed the bulk comes into Canada through Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal. In addition an attempt will be made to determine the volume of the material coming through other ports of entry, a spokesman in the national revenue department said.

Justice Minister Ron Basford meantime has appealed to provincial attorneys general to crack down hard on distributers in this country.

Since then the doctor has heard from nearly 3,000 people who have followed his advice, fewer than a dozen reporting failure. Broadmead Called Threat to Downtown

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Downtown Victoria will suffer from urban blight, with block after block of empty or dying retail stores, if the proposed Broadmead shopping centre in Saanich ever becomes a reality, Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie predicted Wednesday.

McKenzie said Saanich municipality is pushing the project as strongly as it can, in "direct contravention" of the Capital Region Board's long-range plan, because it is desperate to benefit from the resulting tax revenue.

But he said he is not prepared to stand by while a project which will seriously harm the economic health of the city's core area is being nurtured.

He said he will oppose the Broadmead scheme both at city council and regional levels — McKenzie was elected a regional director last November — even if that leads to a serious rift between Victoria and Saanich.

"I think in the months ahead we are going to have real confrontation on this," he warned in an interview.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum has said the Broadmead shopping complex on Royal Oak Avenue, east of the Patricia Bay Highway, could be open by August, 1979. It would be the biggest shopping centre on Vancouver Island, with about 425,000 square feet of commercial space built on 60 acres of land.

Preliminary negotiations with the developers, Broadmead Estates, are expected to be completed by April, after which there will be a public hearing on the firm's application for a land-use contract.

McKenzie believes the Broadmead venture, compounding the counter-attraction of Mayfair, Hillside and other major shopping centres, will virtually sound the death-knell for downtown Victoria as the thriving focus of retail activity in Greater Victoria.

He said he has seen that pattern repeated time after time in U.S. cities, where central core areas have withered away while a few miles out of town there are "flourishing regional shopping centres."

He said some concern has already been expressed by downtown merchants, but he suspects most of them have yet to grasp the full significance of Broadmead's threat.

"If the regional plan means anything at all Saanich will have to stand down on this," McKenzie said, adding that Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis may intervene to kill the proposal.

. . . But Saanich Says It's Going Ahead

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Saanich will proceed with the Broadmead shopping centre because it is vital to the municipality and has the blessing of the Capital Regional District, Mayor Ed Lum said today.

He was replying to charges by Ald. Ron McKenzie who said Victoria merchants are alarmed by the Broadmead proposal because it would draw business away from the downtown core. McKenzie also charged the shopping centre contravenes the community plan for the Capital Regional District.

"The alderman is wrong," Mayor Lum said. "Broadmead has already been incorporated in the community plan for the region.

"If the alderman is concerned about the downtown area he should be promoting development there rather than trying to hold back development in Saanich."

Lum said downtown Victoria would continue to thrive if the city could solve its parking and traffic problems and could encourage development of apartments near the centre of the city.

Regional district chairman Jim Campbell today confirmed that phase one of the Broadmead shopping centre has the blessing of the regional board.

He said the regional district discussed the project two years ago and decided at that time it did not have to give formal approval for the first phase because of its relatively modest size. Phase one could be completed as early as August, 1979.

Campbell said the regional district may be required to give formal approval for any subsequent development of the shopping centre.

Alan Aldous, president of the Downtown Victoria Association, said any development at Broadmead appears to be premature but he would not oppose it.

"If the developers believe there is a large enough population now to support the project then they should go ahead with it. The people who are investing their money are in the best position to make a decision on that," Aldous said.

"My feeling is that the population of the area is not yet large enough to support a shopping centre at Broadmead and that it will draw some business from downtown Victoria because it is premature. But I am a free enterprise man and I will not oppose the development."

Reginald Hind, manager of Eaton's, said Broadmead would draw some business from the downtown core but the drain would not be serious.

Eaton's plans a store in the second phase of Broadmead's development.

Faculty To Vote On Union

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The faculty at the University of Victoria will vote later this year on whether to form a union.

More than 300 members of the UVic Faculty Association have been pondering unionization since September when there was dissatisfaction expressed over wage increases for the 1976-77 teaching year.

At a recent meeting, about 75 members again debated forming a union.

The viewpoints presented at the meeting will be distributed among the membership and the executive will await general reaction before proceeding to the next step, president Rod Symington said.

No date for the vote has been set.

At an earlier meeting in November, the faculty association stripped senior administrators — faculty deans, the vice-president and president — of voting privileges.

The decision needed a two-thirds majority, and narrowly passed with 35 in favor and 13 against.

At the meeting to debate unionization those in favor said the current method of dealing with problems between faculty and administration is fuzzy and messy.

Those opposing unionization suggested basic university goals of teaching and research would not be served by unionization.

Organize Jobless —Knott

A Victoria Labor Council delegate criticized the labor movement Wednesday night for not taking some action to deal with Victoria's unemployment problem.

Ernie Knott of the International Woodworkers of America said the situation is very serious with the official unemployment rate at 10 per cent but the true rate probably "15 per cent or better."

The delegates agreed with his suggestion to have the executive bring the matter up for discussion at the next meeting in two weeks and to propose some policy for organizing the unemployed.

Knott, who is unemployed, noted that several local politicians have spoken up on the problem.

"Everyone but the labor movement is speaking out," he said.

Knott said the council should take some action while the legislature is sitting because no single group has had more of an adverse effect on the area's economy than the Social Credit government.

Delegates also agreed to write to the federal government requesting some action to relieve "the disastrous situation" at Yarrows shipyard.

Dave Higgins of the Boilermakers union had initiated the action saying 70 per cent of the shipyard employees, who belong to 13 different locals, are out of work.

He said 45 per cent of the members in his local, 191, are unemployed.

There are normally about 700 people employed at Yarrows and only about 200 are working, he added.

The delegates also reversed an executive decision to table the question of planning some labor education programs for Channel 10.

The members said the education committee should plan some programs and present them at the next meeting.

The delegates had voted at a meeting Jan. 19 to begin planning the programs but the executive later decided to table the matter.

Stan Darlington, second vice-president, said the fear was expressed by some executive members that such programs "might not do our public image any good."

Daryl Anderson of the Canadian Union of Public Employees asked if there is any way "our image could get any lower than it is now."

Jack Groves of the International Woodworkers of America said the executive had no right to table the matter after it was approved by council delegates.

Student Role Urged In Decision-Making

British Columbia students should be allowed to participate in decision-making in accordance with their maturity and "enjoy feelings of self-reliance, self-confidence, self-discipline and dignity."

The recommendation is one of many in a study, prepared by the B.C. Teachers Federation, which has not formally been made public.

The study also says teachers should have the right to negotiate "all working conditions and conditions of the learning environment" and receive enough time and money "to continually upgrade professionally."

Teachers should also be able to develop, along with their students, the testing procedures to be used in each school.

In its introduction, the study says it is the first step in a review for the BCTF of "all aspects of authority and responsibility in B.C. education."

Among students' rights, the report lists:

—easy access to stimulating learning resources and recreation facilities;

—growth-stimulating influences "such as appropriate temperature, adequate lighting, soft colors, proper humidity, cleanliness and ambient sound levels;

—exposure to global concerns;

—assurance of "due process" in their dealings with the education system and access to educational options to alternatives to suit needs.

Teachers have the responsibility to create stimulating and challenging learning environments and educational alternatives, expose students to various systems of values and to cause students to examine their own values.

Referring to curriculum, the report says teachers have the responsibility to provide a program to meet the needs of each student and "resist the imposition of universal programs and standards."

The main responsibility of school boards and the provincial government is to provide the resources and funding to achieve these goals.

The education ministry should "resist being a prescriptive agent and . . . become a support agent which encouraged maximum decentralization of decision making," the report says.

14-YEAR-OLD FACES CHARGE

A 14-year-old boy faces a charge of criminal negligence stemming from a high-speed car chase through Saanich early today.

A Saanich police spokesman said an officer on patrol on the Pat Bay Highway near Vanalman at 2:04 a.m. tried to pull over a southbound car for a routine check but the car sped off.

Three other Saanich police cars pursued the car at speeds up to 85 miles per hour for more than 10 miles before finally halting it at a roadblock at Douglas and Saanich Road.

Police said the pursued car passed through so many red lights and stop signs officers lost track.

No one was injured. One of the police vehicles received minor damage at the roadblock.

The car driven by the boy belongs to his family, police said.

SHAW

New Post For Shaw

Greater Victoria school district's secretary-treasurer Ernest Shaw has been appointed to the newly-created post of legal and financial affairs adviser.

Shaw's salary will stay the same in the new post where his duties include assisting the board and superintendent on legal and financial matters, and reviewing and drafting the board's policies and bylaws.

Board chairman Susan Brice said the district has been criticized for not having its policies up to date, but no one on staff had time to look into legal and financial policies.

A new secretary-treasurer will be hired later.

Concrete Commitment Demanded on Hospital

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said today public pressure should be kept on Health Minister Bob McClelland to make him spell out when a new hospital will be completed.

Dr. Norman Bailey said it is public pressure which "extracted" a statement from McClelland Wednesday that the new hospital to be built in View Royal will eventually have about 500 beds.

"The public now has an indefinite promise," said Bailey. "It needs a more concrete commitment from him on when the hospital will expand to 500 beds."

The health minister had specified earlier that the new hospital would have 300 beds and that Victoria General would be scaled down from 430 to 169 beds.

BAILEY
. . . keep up pressure

This led the society, which has close to 500 doctors as members, to launch a petition campaign last week urging him not to in effect split Victoria General onto two sites.

Such a move would adversely affect patient care, increase costs and demoralize staff, the society argued. Bailey said Wednesday about 4,000 signatures in support had been gathered in the first three working days since doctors started leading the campaign.

McClelland made clear Wednesday the new hospital will start with 300 beds, with services built in to eventually handle 500 beds. He indicated it was too soon to say when the hospital would reach its ultimate size.

Base Tries for Energy Cut

Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt will try to reduce energy consumption 10 per cent next week as part of a national conservation program.

If the goal is achieved, the base will try to maintain the new level of consumption on a continuing basis for the next decade.

It is part of a continuing conservation program which began in 1974. In that year the total electricity bill for the base was $2.2 million. By 1976 it rose to $3.2 million but this was $236,000 less than it would have been without the conservation methods.

These include turning off lights when rooms are not in use, reducing lighting in offices being used and turning off non-essential heat sources.

The base has also been conserving gasoline by converting to compact cars from larger vehicles wherever possible.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings almost doubled in 1976, to $17,960,000 or $1.49 a share from the $9,768,000 or 81 cents a share recorded in 1975. The figures represent calculations before extraordinary items of $6,517,000 or 54 cents a share. R. G. Duthie, company president, said in a news release that the improvement in earnings was due primarily to the abolition of provincial mineral royalties, improved molybdenum sales, lower exploration expenses and a non-recurring credit resulting from a reduction in Philippine withholding tax on Marcopper dividends to 15 per cent from 35 per cent. Duthie said lower earnings by Mattagami, in which Placer has a 27.12 per cent interest, were an offsetting factor. He said that as of Jan. 31 this year the company had purchased about 80 per cent of the outstanding shares of Canadian Export Gas and Oil Ltd. (CEGO), a production and exploration company based in Alberta. Placer made a purchase offer for all outstanding shares last December and since has spent $43 million in the effort.

Royal Trust

Royal Trust reports net earnings of $19.6 million or $1.78 a share for 1976, up from $18.9 million or $1.83 a share a year earlier. The company's net profit after investment losses, foreign exchange conversions and extraordinary items was $19.1 million or $1.74 a share compared with $17.7 million or $1.71 a share in 1975. In 1976 Royal Trust's total assets grew to $4.3 billion, up from $3.7 billion in 1975.

10% Bottom Seen For Mortgage Dip

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Mortgage interest rates are continuing to decline, as expected, but they are not likely to fall below 10 per cent this year, Victoria Real Estate Board president John Thomson said today.

The mortgage rate has fallen from a 1976 high of 12 per cent to 10.75 and likely will be 10.25 per cent across the city within one week.

"This is a welcome trend and I wish it would go lower," Thomson said.

"Unfortunately, I can not see it going below 10 per cent this year. There is a good supply of mortgage funds right now but the interest rate will climb again when funds become scarce later in the year."

At the moment the lower interest rate has brought renewed vigor to the local real estate market.

"Affordable homes in the range of $45,000 to $80,000 are selling more quickly now with the lower mortgage rate. Homes above that level are continuing to sell slowly but we expect improvement there as well."

The main market problem, he said, is a large surplus of houses for sale, left over from the 1976 doldrums.

"The supply of homes continues to be greater than the demand. This is keeping prices stable but once the supply diminishes there will be an increase in prices."

There were 654 properties for sale under the Multiple Listing Service in Victoria during January, up from 418 in the same month last year.

January sales totalled 201, up slightly from 194, and total sale value was $11.8 million, up $800,000 from the previous January.

Because of the large supply, purchasers are able to get homes at 1976 prices and at a mortgage interest rate of 10.25 per cent, instead of 12 per cent.

The lower rate means lower monthly mortgage payments and therefore makes more people eligible to buy the home of their choice.

Within a short period of time this increased bidding for homes will force prices upwards. Thomson has predicted that Victoria house prices will rise at least 10 per cent this year.

The lower mortgage interest rate was signalled by the Bank of Canada, which reduced its lending rate to the banks to 8 per cent from 8.5 per cent.

This reduces the prime rate of the private banks to 8.75 per cent and will result in a reduction for all lending rates within a short period of time. Bank deposit rates can also be expected to decline.

The mortgage rate has been sitting at 1.5 points above the prime rate for the past six months, although there is no fixed formula for it remaining in this position.

Toronto-Dominion Bank reduced its prime rate to 8.75 per cent and also dropped its mortgage rate half a point to 10.25 per cent in response to the action by the Bank of Canada.

U.S. Envoy Meets on Rhodesia

DAR ES SALAAM (UPI) — The United States' U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young arrived in Africa today for talks with black leaders on ways to resume the stalled talks on Rhodesia.

Young, on his first diplomatic mission for the Carter administration, scheduled a brief stopover in this steamy Indian Ocean capital of Tanzania before flying to the former slaving capital of Zanzibar for meetings with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere and other black African leaders.

A Tanzanian spokesman said Rhodesia will be the major topic during four or five days of talks.

Nyerere, according to a senior foreign ministry official, believes the Geneva talks on Rhodesia must be revived at all costs — even withut the presence of Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith.

Young, who met with British leaders in London Wednesday, called for an Anglo-American effort to break the deadlock in the negotiations.

"Our countries ought to be able to put something together to move things forward," Young said.

The Tanzanian official, however, said Nyerere believes Washington and London "must stop acting as referees" between Smith and the black nationalists.

"We're looking forward to the chance of talking with Mr. Young," the official said. "We want to see what the Carter administration is planning and we want to make sure they understand our position."

The Geneva talks have stalled primarily over who will dominate the transition government that would rule Rhodesia during the transfer of power from the white minority to the black majority. Blacks outnumber whites 23 to 1 in Rhodesia.

Despite the trouble sports in Geneva, Young has expressed optimism that the discussions can resume.

"It is up to the 'front-line' (black) presidents to let the situation settle and return to Geneva," Young said.

French Foreign Legion Set for Last Pull-Out

DJIBOUTI (UPI) — A last hurrah is sounding for the French Foreign Legion in this desolate colonial outpost on the horn of Africa.

The legion is probably the most talked about, written about, filmed and romanticized military unit in history.

But France is scheduled to withdraw from its last African colony by mid year, further reducing the legion's traditional role as the elite par excellence shock troops of the French Empire.

Currently, though, the sunbronzed legionnairs of the 13th demi-brigade stationed here are the same, tough, tight-lipped soldiers of fortune immortalized in a score of Beau Geste movies.

There are Yugoslavs, West Germans, Spaniards, Belgians, Italians and a sprinkling of Americans and Canadians among the 1,500 legionnaires who help keep the peace in the 8,880-square-mile wasteland of Djibouti.

They work hard and play hard.

In desert camouflage and American-made jeeps they patrol the 250-mile-long colonial border in what is officially the world's hottest region, skirmishing occasionally with nomad raiders from Somalia.

At night, superbly turned out in immaculately starched khaki and distinctive white kepis the legionnaires invade the restaurants of downtown Djibouti, reveling in their reputations.

Other troops move respectfully aside when the legionnaires enter the town's most popular bar, La Fleche Rouge.

The thousands of girls who throng the city's nightclubs reputedly charge more for their favors to the legionnaires "because we have to work harder."

But the legion has become a fighting unit with no war to fight, and there seems to be a restlessness in the ranks with its diminishing world role.

One legionnaire, over a beer, said he was returning shortly to France and would quit after serving for five years because he was bored.

"I have been here for two years and the only excitement was last year when we were called in to rescue 30 French school children kidnapped by terrorists," he said.

The legionnaires became so enthusiastic during this rare fight they went on to storm a nearby Somali border post, drawing outraged protests from the government in Mogadishu.

The legionnaires are under strict orders not to discuss their role with strangers, but in bars on such streets as Rue Verdun and Rue Marseilles they are only too happy to pour out their grievances to girlfriends and visitors.

"We're doing a hell of a lot more road-building than fighting here," grumbled another legionnaire, reflecting the unit's main job here now — to build roads and military installations.

But whatever the grumbling, the legion is still one of the toughest and most disciplined units in the world.

Though the pay is low (less than $200 a month in France, but double that here) officers say the legion has more volunteers than it needs.

A large number of volunteers, who must be from 18 to 40 are still Germans, but they have now been outnumbered by Yugoslavs.

Officers are exclusively French and can take their wives to duty posts such as Djibouti but as one growled, "we regard the enlisted men as permanent bachelors."

Officially, the legion will not take anyone with a known criminal record, but as every movie watcher knows and officers admit, "few questions are asked about the past" and once enlisted, a man can change his name.

PCB Found in Harbor

Federal biologists today are attempting to determine how widespread are the effects of a poisonous chemical spill into Porpoise Harbor from the Canadian Cellulose mill near Prince Rupert 12 days ago.

So far crabs taken from about 150 yards to five miles away from the spill site show no signs of contamination from the troxic chemical polyohlorinated biphenyl (PCB), fisheries biologists said.

But tests so far on water, sediment and sea life have been only preliminary and further tests will be required to determine concentrations of the chemical, they said.

They said it is certain that PCB escaped from the drainage system of the mill into the harbor, but exactly how much escaped is not known.

Biologist consider the spill a serious one as the chemical is so toxic a gallon of PCB would contaminate a body of water like Lake Cowichan.

The chemical is practically indestructable and can only be destroyed if burned at a temperature of 3,0000 degrees Fahrenheit.

The accident occurred when a CanCel transformer released about 180 gallons of PCB when it overheated and exploded.

About 120 gallons were contained on the roof of the mill while the rest apparently escaped through a roof drain and into the network of sewers which discharged into the harbor.

A B.C. Pollution branch spokesman said the chemical on the roof has been mopped up.

"The next step is to find a furnace hot enough to destroy the chemical," he said.

Gary Gallon, Vancouver director of SPEC, said the danger to humans comes when the chemical disperses into the food chain.

It can cause cancer over a long period of time, as well as other physicaal disorders, he said.

Raises Denied Top Earners

ROME (Reuter) — The Italian government has banned pay increases for higher-paid workers in an effort to fight Italy's worsening economic crisis.

The ban will affect about 400,000 workers, mainly employed by local authorities, banks, insurance firms and the chemical industry. Italian workers receive automatic wage increases tied to the cost-of-living index every three months.

India Visit Set

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — President Nikolai Podgorny of the Soviet Union will make an official visit to India at the end of this month.

RELEASE URGED OF GRADE 4 TEST

Results of last year's province-wide test of Grade 4 pupils should be released to individual schools, a special committee studying the test has recommended.

The committee of parents, educators and trustees said individual school results would reveal strengths and weaknesses to each principal and his staff. Results of the test were released only district by district.

Trustee Hal Knight, however, said the department of education was reluctant to be more specific with the results for fear they would be used to compare schools.

The committee felt local Grade 4s were better than expected in word Identification, but only satisfactory in comprehension, although both results were higher than provincial average.

Teachers should be encouraged to develop questioning techniques to improve comprehension, the committee recommended.

BILL MUNROE

Munro, Reid Rejoin Macs

Both Victoria McDonalds, who won the Canadian junior "A" lacrosse chanpionship last season, and their executive will sport a new look this year.

The executive has been restructured to include representatives from every lacrosse association in the Greater Victoria area.

"I think we have a complete community club now," said general-manager Bob Reid, who confirmed today that both he and coach Bill Munroe will be back when the gym workouts for the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League teams get underway March 1.

Reid said Norm Baker of the Shamrocks' senior "A" club was named to the executive Wednesday and further additions from the other area associations can be expected within a week.

Munroe resigned last September after coaching McDonalds for 13 seasons and Reid had been thinking about resigning after five years in his position.

"We both feel it would be kind of rough to leave the club at this time," Reid said.

But their duties this season will be a little different.

Munroe will concentrate on a major rebuilding program and will leave the day-to-day coaching responsibilities to two assistants to be named later. Reid also plans to delegate a little more responsibility.

McDonalds lost 11 players following the Minto Cup victory and have only nine returnees for the upcoming season. So there'll be a lot of new faces around when the gym workouts start and training camp opens April 3 at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Other executives elected at a meeting Wednesday were president Ed Hardy, vice-president Bob Snell, secretary-treasurer George Jakubowski and directors Al Dysart and Harry Wyckoff.

Five Shots, Five Goals, New Mark

By The Canadian Press

Defenceman Ian Turnbull, who had a 30-game scoring drought earlier this year, set a National Hockey League record Wednesday night, scoring on all five shots he took at the Detroit Red Wings net.

The five goals, a league record for a defenceman, gave Toronto Maple Leafs a 9-1 win over the Wings.

"It was a long drought, although I had just as many chances in the last 30 games and nothing happened," said Turnbull, 23, who scored 20 goals last season and now has 16 in his third year with the Leafs.

He ended his lengthy drought on Toronto's recent prolonged road trip with two in a losing cause to Los Angeles.

In other NHL games Wednesday, Pittsburgh Penguins beat Minnesota North Stars 5-2, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Atlanta Flames 4-2 and Los Angeles Kings beat Washington Capitals 7-2.

In the World Hockey Association, Birmingham Bulls beat Cincinnati Stingers 3-2, Indianapolis Racers upset Quebec Nordiques 6-5 and San Diego Mariners beat Calgary Cowboys 6-4.

Turnbull credited a change in the Leafs' style of play for his good scoring chances. With high-scoring centre Darryl Sittler out of the lineup with a rib injury, the team has been playing a closer checking style. "Our wingers are coming back, allowing the defence more mobility, more chance to move the puck."

After a scoreless first period, Turnbull scored twice to lead a five-goal Leafs barrage in the second period against Wings goalie Ed Giacomin. Jim Rutherford replaced Giacomin in the third period and Turnbull quickly beat him with a long slapshot from the blueline and then added two more in the final three minutes.

Syl Apps scored two goals and assisted on another to lead Pittsburgh over Minnesota. The Penguins centre said his success was largely due to the fact the opposition payed little attention to him.

"Jean Pronovost scored 52 goals last year," said Apps. "Any team will give a player like that a lot more attention than they give me."

Apps scored Pittsburgh's first goal midway through the first period after taking a pass in the slot from Ron Stackhouse. In the third period, he passed to Bob Kelly for a score. And with 2:55 remaining in the game, Apps scored again.

Despite the loss, Minnesota coach Ted Harris had kind words for his young players.

"We had two rookie lines out there," he said. "In fact, seven of our nine regular forwards are rookies. These kids have come a long way this season but they still make a lot of mistakes."

Stan Mikita's 496th career goal for the Hawks was the winner at Chicago. The veteran Hawks centre beat Atlanta goalie Phil Myre on a screen shot.

Chiefs' Goalie Baffles Bruins

By The Canadian Press

A five-goal outburst by Saskatoon Blades in the third period lifted the team to a 7-3 win over Regina Pats Wednesday night in one of five Western Canada Hockey League games.

In the other encounters, Kamloops Chiefs scored a 5-2 win over New Westminster Bruins; Portland Winter Hawks defeated Lethbridge Broncos 6-3, Brandon Wheat Kings beat Medicine Hat Tigers 7-3 and Flin Flon Bombers defeated Winnipeg Monarchs 14-5.

Dale Yakiwchuk broke a 2-2 tie in Portland to pace the Winter Hawks to their win. Other scorers for Portland were Wayne Babych, with two, Paul Mulvey, Dave Hoyda, and Tony Currie.

Doug Morrison, Grant Eakin and Steve Tambellini scored for Lethbridge.

In Kamloops, goalie Ian Henderson came up with 52 saves to lead the Chiefs to their first win over New Westminster this year.

The Chiefs, with period leads of 1-0 and 3-0, got two goals from Brad Maxwell with singles by Reg Kerr, Athony Thomas and Mike Boychuk.

Errol Rausse and Allen Young scored for the Bruins.

New Champ Certain

Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, who is recovering from a leg injury, won't be defending his singles crown when the annual Vancouver Island Open badminton championships get underway Friday at both the host Cordova Bay Club and Racquet Club courts.

A total of 133 entries have been received for the tourney.

Action gets underway at 6:30 p.m. Friday, resumes at 8:30 a.m. Saturday on Cordova Bay, Racquet Club and Brentwood Bay courts and concludes Sunday at Cordova Bay with flight finals beginning at 10 a.m. and championship finals getting underway at 1 p.m.

One of the top contenders for Rollick's title is another Vancouverite, former Canadian champion Wayne Macdonnell.

Rollick, however, won't be idle — he's entered in both the doubles and mixed doubles events.

Sandra Stevenson of Vancouver is back to try for another double victory. She is defending the women's singles title and sharing defence of the doubles crown with Susan Truscott, also of Vancouver.

THERE'S SADNESS IN STITCHES for Carole Gagnon of Charlesbourgh FSC, who suffered leg cut Wednesday when her partner fell during novice dance final in Canadian figure skating championships at Calgary. Dr. Jack Bullard works on three-stitch job that enabled sad-faced Carole to return and finish event, well behind winning Ontario pair of Marianne Van Bommel and Wayne Deweyert.

Kerry Doesn't Have Secret; Unless Hard Work Is Secret

CALGARY (CP) — Teams from Ontario's Preston Figure Skating Club finished one-two Wednesday in both novice and junior pairs competitions at the 1977 Canadian figure skating championships, enabling coach Kerry Leitch to continue his domination of the events.

Josie France of Cambridge and Paul Mills of Sheffield edged ahead of the reigning world junior champions, Sherri Baier of Mitchell and Robin Cowan of Waterloo, in one battle of Ontario pairs, while Lorri Baier of Mitchell and Lloyd Eisler of Seaforth defeated Lee-Ann Jackson of Brantford and Rodger Collins-Wright of Cambridge in the other to win the novice title. The junior pairs competition end today with free skating.

Leitch leaves Calgary on Saturday with France and Mills to try to retain for his club the world junior championship that Baier and Cowan captured at Megeve, France, last year.

Before the junior competition, Leitch said he found it impossible to predict which team would win, but said Sherri Baier's back injury forced her team to drop some scheduled moves.

"As a coach, I like one team better on one day and the other pair more on the second day," said Leitch. "They are entirely different in style."

Leitch is easily the busiest coach at the championships, with 16 competitors—all from western Ontario—scheduled to compete.

He had the top four novice pairs and the two leading junior pairs last year but said in an interview there is no secret to his success—"unless hard work is a secret."

A crowd of about 1,800 cheered as Lorri Baier and Eisler completed the first throw double axel in the history of Canadian novice competition and won with ease over team-mates Jackson and Collins-Wright.

Another novice pair from the Preston club, Mary-Jo Fedy of Waterloo and Tim Mills of Sheffield—Paul's younger brother—gave a strong performance but finished fifth behind Katherina Matousek and Brad Starchuk of Vancouver and Cori-Jo and Bill Petrunik of Lethbridge, Alta.

Vanessa Howe and Jeffrey Mawle of Victoria wound up in eighth position.

So close was the race for third spot that Matousek and Starchuk won when the seventh judge, Frances Dafoe of Toronto, placed them third and the Petruniks eighth.

Canada's top hope for international prominence in dance competition, Susan Carscallen of Sudbury, Ont., and Eric Gillies of Moncton, N.B., both of whom now live in Toronto, led as expected after the three compulsory dances, accounting for the first 30 per cent of marks in the competition.

In second place were Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., with Debbie and Greg Young of Toronto third.

Marianne Van Bommel of Belmont, Ont., and Wayne Deweyert of London, Ont., members of the St. Thomas Skating Club, combined to win the novice dance event, trailed by Laura King and Doug Kelly of Ottawa with Rhonda and Jaimie Greenwood of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., third.

Kerry Spong of Vancouver and Michael Tracy of Coquitlam were fourth, followed by the Victoria combination of Jennifer and Oliver Coomes.

Gary Beacom of Toronto and Cathy MacFarlane of Calgary took strides toward men's and women's junior championships, recording victories in compulsory figures which account for 30 per cent of potential marks.

Beacom, 16, opened a commanding lead over Gordon Forbes of Brockville and Rick O'Neill of Toronto as Ontario skaters grabbed the top three spots.

MacFarlane, competing at her home Glencoe club, was trailed by Carolyn Skoczen of Windsor, Ont., and Vicky Stowe of Toronto.

Titans Take Over Top Rugby Berth

St. Mike's were unexpectedly idle Wednesday and were promptly dropped out of a tie for first place in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Owning a three-game victory streak in the young season, St. Michael's University School had Wednesday's scheduled match with Claremont postoned until Friday.

The switch opened the gate for Victoria High Titans and the Titans marched right in to take over sole possession of the top rung with a 22-10 conquest of Speetrum on the Vic High pitch.

That gave the Titans four straight victories and a two-point bulge over SMU, now sharing the runner-up berth with Mount Douglas Mountainmen, who rolled past Reynolds 39-10.

In other Wednesday matches, Parkland Panthers pounded Belmont 20-0 and Oak Bay Barbarians, winners of their league match against Esquimalt by default, topped Alberni Chieftains 21-0 in an exhibition encounter.

Tim White, with two tries, and Steve Forsyth, with a try and a penalty goal, paced the Vic High attack.

Also notching two tries in Wednesday's wars were Bob Young of Mount Douglas, Brett Hartley of Parkland and Oak Bay's Steve Bristow.

Hawkes Rink Wins Playoff

Bob Hawkes defeated Tim Horrigan 8-6 to capture a playoff for second place in the Carling O'Keefe men's super league Wednesday night. Horrigan had eliminated Ted Juritsa 7-5 in an earlier playoff game as the three rinks had tied for second behind Steve Skillings in league play which ended Tuesday. Horrigan and Jurista will meet later to decide third place. Victory was worth $400 to the Hawkes rink. Skillings' rink took $600 for the first-place finish.

City Rinks in Tough In PCCA Men's Final

Most eyes in curling will be focused on Langley this weekend where the annual Pacific Coast Curling men's championship will take place. And demanding most of the attention will be veteran Bernie Sparkes, 35 of the Vancouver Curling Club.

Sparkes will be bidding for his ninth appearance in the Macdonald Brier Canadian curling championship to be held in Montreal, March 6-12, but first he must get through the eight-rink, double loss PCCA event. He has been on five PCCA championship rinks.

Sparkes has only one change from the rink which won the PCCA berth and the B.C. title last year. Vic Wood replaces Bert Gretzinger at third. Gretsinger was the all-star third in last year's Brier. Other members of the rink are second Al Cook and lead Keiven Bauer.

Expected to provide the most opposition for Sparkes is the Gary Sigurdson rink of Cloverdale. Sigurdson is back for this third straight PCCA final with the same rink as last year when he lost to Sparkes in the "B" final. Ron Trottier is at third, Dale Walker, second, and Don Patterson, lead.

Another veteran rink is the Roy Vinthers foursome of Vancouver club. Vinthers has Leo Hebert at third, Greg Pruden at second and Barry Naimark at lead. Hebert and Naimark played on the late Lyall Dagg's world championship rink of 1964 and were also with Dagg in the 1970 Brier at Winnipeg.

Trev Fisher of New Westminster is another respected entry. He skipped a rink to the Canadian mixed championship in 1972. He has Gerry Lawrence at third, Don Babbington, second; and Mike Pryce, lead.

Jerry Martin of Vancouver qualified out of the Totem bonspiel as did Sparkes. He has Barry Paner at third, Bruce Davey, second; and Fuji Miki, lead. Davey is from Ottawa.

Max Gorlon of North Vancouver, is hopefully following in his father's footsteps. His father, Max Sr., played for Ches Chesher of Trail in the 9151 Brier. With Gordon are Monty Olson, third; Ralph Turney, second; and Al Redekop, lead.

The two Island representatives are two young rinks, both from Victoria Club. It will be their first taste of PCCA action and they are in tough company.

Steve Skillings, 21, lost only one game in the south Island and Island playoffs. That was to the other VCC rep, Tim Horrigan. And Horrigan, 25, only lost one game. That was to Skillings.

And that's just how close they are in talent. Murray Walker throws third rocks for Skillings, Don Nemeth, second; and Kim Browning, lead. Don Edl is third for Horrigan with Greg Boorman at second and push-broomer Tom Machan at lead.

First draw is Friday at 8 p.m. Saturday draws are at 10 a.m., 3 and 8 p.m. Sunday's draw is at 10 a.m. and, if necessary, at 3 p.m.

Winner will meet the B.C. Curling Association champion in a best-of-three series at Kelowna, Feb. 12-13. Bob McWhirter has qualified from Prince George for the BCCA final which starts Sunday.

Locally, 12 Victoria Club rinks will play off this weekend to determine five spots in the south Island mixed playdowns also at Victoria, Feb. 11-13. Sixteen rinks, four from the Racquet Club, two from Juan de Fuca, three from Esquimalt and two from Playland will join the VCC qualifiers in the south Island draw.

There will be one rink missing from the previously announced list of up-Island rinks. Larry Ringdahl of Gold River has scratched out.

Meanwhile, the first Prier rep has been determined. Don Twa of Whitehorse, N.W.T., chalked up a record of five wins and one loss in the Northwest Territories — Yukon playoffs to qualify for this year's national finals.

With Twa are John Trout, third; Lionel Stokes, second and Kip Boyd, lead. Dawn Alexander of Yellowknife won the women's championship.

Joe Laturnus, who will throw second rocks for Island champion Don Matheson in the south Island mixed, warmed up for that event with a victory at Playland, Sunday. Laturnus took athe "A" event championship of the annual Knights of Columbus bonspiel. Curling with Laturnus were Rita Zapotichny, third; John Garrett, second, Jean Laturnus, lead. Henri Doucet of Victoria won "B" event and Luke Weber of Port Alberni, "C" event. Thirty-four rinks took part. Bonspiel profits will go to K of C charities.

Dale Shooting for a 76

Dale Shaw set herself a target today in the chilly breezes at Sarasota, Fla., as she continued her bid to qualify for a playing card on the U.S. Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

The several-time Victoria City Amateur champion, who plays out of the Glen Meadows course, was aiming at 76 or better in the third round of the 72-hole test tournament on Sarasota's 6,302-yard Bent Tree course.

Putting miseries again plagued Shaw Wednesday as she carded a seven-over-par 79 for a 36-hole tally of 159, nine strokes behind American co-leaders Debbie Skinner and Debbie Massey, to stand 17th in the field of 48.

Officials of the LPGA, who earlier had indicated all players scoring 312 or better of rhte 72 holes would receive playing cards, were expected to announce today how many cards would be issued. If they set a definite number, some scores above 312 may be good enough to qualify.

Shaw, conceding that she is in danger missing the qualifying list, believed that a count of 76 or lower today would leave her in reasonably good position in the bid to earn a playing card.

Despite cool temperatures and gusty winds, Massey, the current Canadian Amateur queen, carded a two-under-par 70 Wednesday to pull even with Skinner at 150.

Cloud Nine's Bursting Bubble Puts New Air in Island Indoor

(Second of Two Parts)

So you've become an indoor tennis nut, eh?

You've discovered the delight of getting in out of the damp and are now one of the hundreds happily haunting the new municipal covered courts in Oak Bay. But do you even wonder what has happened to Island Indoor Tennis Inc. — the club that started the whole indoor thing here exactly two years ago this month?

Has the mushrooming of Oak Bay's Cloud Nine burst the bubble in Central Saanich?

"No, definitely not!" Island Indoor owner Carolyn Rhomberg says emphatically.

In fact, both she and Australian-born head pro Ian Brady insist it's actually improved things for them.

"The new centre in the city has whetted people's appetite for indoor tennis," Carolyn explains. "Now we are getting an overflow of players who are frustrated because they can't get a court in Oak Bay."

To accommodate these players IIT has seen the light and has gone partially public, making three of their five courts available to non-members between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. from Monday to Friday at $7 per court per hour.

That's only $2 per court more than it is at Oak Bay and you have the added benefits of being able to reserve a court up to six days in advance (it's 24 hours in Oak Bay) and of being permitted to play for an hour, an hour and-a-half or two hours if you wish instead of the one-hour limit imposed under Cloud Nine.

Since the Oak Bay indoor centre opened in December, IIT has steadily been receiving more inquiries on court use and membership each week.

But Carolyn isn't kidding herself. She knows they could do with a lot more members. In fact, with 150 memberships (some doubles and some families) and a total of 238 players, the club is under half full!

"Accepted court saturation is 80 memberships per court," says Brady. "So we could handle 400 memberships here."

At only 150 memberships, they are a lot short of that, of course, and Island Indoor's planned second stage of building — a permanent structure housing more courts and a restaurant alongside the present bubble — remains a dream. But Carolyn Rhomberg is undaunted.

"We are doing well and have a good club," she says.

"The value of joining a club like this is in the organized tennis on special nights controlled by a pro," points out Brady, who had a wealth of playing and teaching experience in Australia and was later head pro at both Western Indoor and Richmond tennis clubs on the Lower Mainland.

Brady is dubious of the worth of many municipal coaching schemes and says there's a danger young players will learn to do things the wrong way.

"It's great to provide indoor tennis cheap, because it increases your tennis base," he said. "But there's no substitute for quality."

And it's a known fact, the pro stresses, that all junior tennis stars come from private clubs.

"So we are not really going public, but we can squeeze non-members in on three courts midweek," Carolyn explains.

"We have a basic membership and we want very much to maintain the club spirit ... friends meeting friends."

UVic Tourney Draws 28 Teams

"Impressive" might be too light a term to describe the lineup for both men's and women's divisions of the University of Victoria international volleyball tournament.

The three-day affair, which gets underway Friday, boasts 16 men's teams from as far away as Brazil and the 12-team women's competition has attracted entries from as far afield as Phoenix.

Both the old UVic gym and the McKinnon gym will be in use starting at 4 p.m. Friday. Action resumes at 9 a.m. Saturday at both UVic facilities as well as the Mt. Douglas High School gym and concludes Sunday starting at 9 a.m. back at UVic.

Finals Sunday will be at 1 p.m. for women and 2:30 p.m. for men in the McKinnon gym.

The men's division boasts one of the most competitive fields ever assembled for a tournament in Canada.

Paulo Roberto de Freitas, a member of the Brazilian national team and one of the top four setters at the Montreal Olympics, is included in the lineup of Gama Filho University. The team, which arrived Wednesday, won the All-Brazil intercollegiate championship last year.

Another entry, the University of Winnipeg, boasts two first-string Canadian national team members — centre blocker Garth Pishke and setter Don Michelski.

Pishke is one of the top spikers in the world.

Greg Russell, a former Victorian, will be back as one of the key players for the University of Manitoba, which is under the direction of national coach Bill Neville. Russell, at six-foot-six, was an effective first-string player for the national team in Montreal.

A definite threat to take the tournament trophy, the Calgary Volleyball Club placed third in the Canadian championship last year and has been bolstered by the return of Al Taylor, who was captain of the national squad, and Eli Romanchyk, another Canadian player.

Making the trip from southern California is Loyola University, which features an excellent defence and should provide some stiff opposition for all teams.

UBC Thunderbirds, who took the Canadian intercollegiate title last year, recently won the inaugural Canada West University Athletic Association tourney under the leadership of five-year veteran Keith Gallicano and former national players Mike Rockwell and Bob Vosburg, a UVic grad.

Other definite threats are the Vancouver Volleyball Club, which finished runner-up to the University of Southern California in last year's tournament, and Multnomah Athletic Club of Portland, which placed fourth in the United States two seasons ago and has U.S. national team member Scott Lindberg in the lineup.

UVic Vikings, coached by Al Scott, will carry the local colors and appear capable of beating any of the visiting squads. Vikings open against Brazil at 9 p.m. Friday in the McKinnon gym. Rick Crosby, a Victoria High grad, will be directing a potent offence led by six-foot-six blockers Rick Chapple and Al Kostiuk. In addition, the play of spikers Mike Bonnell and Mark Byra has improved lately.

Rounding out the men's field are the Edmonton Phoenix, B.C. Olympics, University of Washington, Eugene Volleyball Club of Oregon and three B.C. provincial squads.

Pepperdine University of Los Angeles, which finished fourth in the U.S. national intercollegiate championships in December, will add an extra bit of competitiveness to the women's tourney.

Another pre-tourney favorite must be Vancouver Chimos, who have held a monopoly on the Canadian championship for the past decade. The return of Canadian Olympic team members Cathy Girvan and Patty Olson should add some extra punch to the lineup, which also includes former nationals Helen Hunt and June Wilms.

Other teams to keep an eye on are the UBC Thunderettes, who finished second in the Canadian championship last year, and UVic Vikettes, who have been improving steadily over the past few months under coach Kent Andrews.

The addition of Linda Chiu, a national junior team member who recently enrolled at UVic, will lend some top-notch experience to the Vikettes and five-eleven Denise Montgomery has added some valuable height to the front line. Alison Penny, a third-year veteran, and Diana McDonald, who is in her fourth year, provide the steadying influence needed for a tournament of this calibre.

Rounding out the women's field are the University of Calgary, Edmonton, Phoenix, J. P. Volleyball Club of Surrey, Nova of Seattle, Shayla of Seattle as well as Victoria "Y" and Victoria Volleyball Club.

Spectators can get a sneak preview of some of the men's competition tonight at Esquimalt High School.

Brazil will take on a B.C. provincial team at 7 and Loyola will tackle Vikings at 8:30.

Deferred Pay Answer For Barons

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — If Cleveland Barons are willing to defer 27 per cent of their pay until May, the financially troubled National Hockey League team may be able to finish the season.

Barons majority owner Mel Swig; John Ziegler, chairman of the NHL's board of governors, and Alan Eagleson, director of the NHL Players' Association, put their heads together Wednesday for nearly six hours before meeting with the players and offering a slim hope for the beleaguered franchise.

Swig asked the players to defer more than a quarter of their pay, retroactive to Jan. 1, with the cut restored May 15. He also asked the Barons' Salt Lake City farm club in the Central Hockey League to agree to a larger, though still unspecified, pay deferment.

'PLAY . . . OR RETIRE' VIKES TELL FOREMAN

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Minnesota Vikings general-manager Mike Lynn said Wednesday that all-pro halfback Chuck Foreman "will either play for the Vikings — or retire."

An attorney for Foreman said the top Viking running back had no intention of suiting up for the Vikings anymore.

"He will not play under this contract for the Vikings and he doesn't want the matter discussed anymore," attorney Tom Reich was quoted as saying in a copyrighted dispatch in the Chicago Tribune.

"We have said we do not contemplate a trade," Lynn said. "So Foreman will either play for the Vikings—or retire."

Foreman is under contract until 1978.

"It is a long-standing policy of the club not to renegotiate anyone's contract," Lynn said. "We feel very comfortable in the two year contract extension offer we have made.

WANT TO PLAY NOW

Grads Want None of Habs

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three graduating junior hockey players have taken an early stand against playing for Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

Brad Maxwell, Barry Beck and Mark Lofthouse of New Westminster Bruins of the Western Canada Hockey League are all 19 years old and will be eligible for NHL's amateur draft this spring. Hockey scouts consider the trio to be among the best graduating juniors in the country.

They share a common belief that being drafted by the powerful Canadiens would prevent them from playing immediately in the NHL.

"I want to go to an NHL team which will use me right away," Maxwell, a defenceman, said in a recent interview. "No one is going to step into that Montreal lineup for years, especially on defence.

"I'd like to go to a team like Minnesota or Vancouver because they need help on defence and I'd get a chance to play next year."

Beck, a six-foot-one, 210-pound defenceman, said he has no preference in the draft as long as he isn't selected by Montreal.

"It might be six years before a defenceman can break into the Montreal lineup," said Beck. "There are lots of teams that need immediate help on defence and I want a chance to play right away in the NHL."

Lofthouse, a high-scoring right winger, said it would be almost impossible to break into the Montreal lineup, even though right wing is considered the Canadiens' weakest position.

"The Canadiens have lots of good, young right wingers playing in Nova Scotia, I'm told," said Lofthouse. "It's been my dream ever since I can remember to play in the NHL and I don't want to get stuck in the minors for years like some of the Montreal drafts.

"I think I'll be a first-round pick, possibly in the first 10, and I want to play in the NHL as soon as possible."

The Canadiens annually manage to secure more than one first-round draft choice and have had as many as four in the initial round. Montreal already has two first-round picks in the 1977 draft.

Maxwell and Beck are expected to be taken in the first five picks.

Maxwell, Brandon-born and Victoria-raised, has already signed with super agent Alan Eagleson of Toronto because "he did a good job for a friend of mine."

Ipswich Upset by Wolverhampton

LONDON (Reuter) — Ipswich Town, English First Division title contenders, was knocked out of the Football Association Cup competition in a fourth-round replay Wednesday night, going down 1-0 away to Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Wolves striker John Richards scored in the 22nd minute, rising high in the air to head home his 10th goal in 12 league and Cup games. Richards had also scored both Wolves goals in the 2-2 draw in Ipswich last Saturday.

Ipswich had several chances to draw level, but Trevor Whymark and Paul Mariner both missed golden opportunities.

Derby County got a goal from Leighton James to win its fourth-round replay against Fourth Division Colchester, 1-0 ,while in the only First Division contest, Leeds United defeated Birmingham 1-0 to repeat its victory over the side it beat in the Cup last Saturday.

There was more bad luck Wednesday for Scottish international centre-half Jim Holton, transfer listed recently by Sunderland. The former Manchester United defender fell awkwardly after a tackle in a reserve game and was carried off with a broken leg.

In a Scottish Cup third round replay, Celtic hammered Airdrieonians 5-0, four goals coming from Joe Craig.

Bird-Count Row Led to Boy's Slaying

PORTLAND, Ore. — Daniel Winniford, 31, was sentenced to seven years in prison this week for the beating-drowning death of a three-year-old boy that police said followed a slight dispute over birds.

The judge who sentenced the defendant suggested the most fitting punishment might be a public beating.

Winniford, guardian for Steven Crawford, pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the child's death last Oct. 7.

Circuit court judge Clifford Olsen said the death occurred after a "very minor disagreement" between the child and Winniford over the number of birds seen in Winniford's yard.

Olsen said Winniford apparently was not satisfied with the answer the child gave and "he took him upstairs and beat him almost continuously for almost 2½ hours."

Olsen said he wondered if the most fitting punishment would be to put the defendant in "an old fashioned stock" for a public beating in downtown Portland.

A statement by Winniford to police after the death said: "I've done nothing wrong. What I did was right. A child has to learn discipline somewhere. They certainly don't teach it in the school."

Winniford told the court he beat the child with a stick to discipline him, and put him in a bathtub to revive him after the youngster appeared lifeless.

Chris Liked Snail Better

HOVE, England — The marriage of Christopher and Deborah Hudson broke up after only four months Wednesday. The couple blamed their problems on snails.

Christopher, 22, gained fame a few years ago when he bred the giant snail Geronimo, which reached 11½ inches in length before its death last year.

After his October wedding to Deborah, 20, Christopher apparently promised to give up snails. This week he admitted he has not been able to forget them.

He said, in fact, that he has signed a contract for a series of television appearances on snails.

"That was the last straw for Deborah," he said.

Visa Denied Professor

OTTAWA — The immigration department has refused for the third time to allow a West German professor to come to Canada on a visit.

The department said that Andre Gunder Frank, a lecturer at the Max Planck Research Institute of Frankfurt, wanted to attend a seminar at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., in March.

An official said it is not in the interest of Canada to permit Prof. Frank to enter Canada. She would say no more.

Prof. Frank first came to the department's attention in May, 1966, when he applied for landed immigrant status. He was a visiting lecturer at Sir George Williams University at the time.

The department spokesman said he left the country in June of that year, which was just as well because he would not have been permitted to be a landed immigrant.

Since then the department has rejected three applications for visitors' visas.

The Queen's seminar in March is to be on development and the Third World.

A published report in Toronto describes Prof. Frank as an internationally-known author and economist.

The West German embassy here says it has never heard of the man, although the Max Planck institute is highly renowned in Germany.

LLAMAS TAKE OVER AS POPULAR PETS

CALGARY — How much is that llama in the window?

The words may not sound quite right; but, llamas are the hottest things in the pet line today, according to Dave England, a provincial wildlife officer.

The demand for llamas is just one facet of city dwellers' increasing fascination with exotic and often macabre pets, England says.

"Right now, we get all kinds of people phoning in for permits to own a pet llama," England adds.

"For the life of me I don't know why but it's not legal to keep a llama in captivity for private use."

Skunks are also becoming very popular, England says.

"They make a great pet but they're not legal either."

All kinds of exotic vets, including tarantulas, are being stocked in city pet shops and one store owner says he "can't keep enough boa constrictors in stock because the demand is so high."

So take a good long look at Fido. He may be an endangered species.

'Stop Chasing My Wife'

AARHUS, Denmark — As the minister intoned a benediction, a member of his Lutheran congregation rose in his pew in the village church of Sabro near here and called out: "Vicar, there is something I want to say to you. This is no threat, but unless you stop running after my wife you'll be in for a sound trashing."

Falka Gregersen, a 51-year-old civil engineer, was fined $50 by a district court today for disturbing the peace during last year's Christmas Eve service.

Rev. Sven Voss, 42, was fired by the ministry of churches, who said there were "profound disagreements between vicar and congregation." The ministry did not refer to the incident.

The minister, whose own wife had left him and sought a divorce, conceded in court that relations between him and the parishioner's wife had gone beyond mere friendship.

Gregersen, who told the court he once considered the vicar his best friend, said "since the church is where the priest gives his messages to the congregation I decided that the church must also be the place where I gave my message to the priest."

Music to Open Richard

Opening night of Bastion Theatre's Richard III Friday will be filled with the sweet sounds that Shakespeare himself so loved and frequently eulogized in his plays..

Special guest artist for the occasion will be James Kennedy, a Victoria expert in the field of early music and musical instruments, who will stroll among the opening night crowd in the McPherson foyer playing a selection of airs on the medieval recorder (ancestor of the flute).

The period-evoking music is a crowning touch to the pageantry inherent in this full production with its cast of 32 actors from across Canada.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. and the show is scheduled to run through Feb. 12 (no performance Monday) with matinees Sunday and Wednesday at 2 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the McPherson or the Hillside Mall ticket centre.

'King-Size Leprechaun', Greg Clark, Dies at 84

TORONTO (CP) — Gregory Clark, a veteran newspaper man and one of Canada's best known and loved story-tellers, died in hospital today after a brief illness. He was 84.

Clark's newspaper career began with The Star in 1911 and was broken only by two years of service in the First World War.

Described as a "king-sized Leprechaun," Mr. Clark said he entered the newspaper business through the side door because his father was editor of The Star at the time.

Mr. Clark later worked for The Star Weekly and his full-page feature, illustrated by his pal Jimmy Frise who died in 1948, was one of tht forces that built the magazine.

In 1947, he and Frise left to join the weekly Montreal Standard which developed into Weekend Magazine. He was Weekend's associate editor and his regular full-page "shortie"—as he called it—and his daily column Packsack in a score of newspapers, made him one of the the most widely-read Canadian columnists.

The University of Western Ontario in London awarded him an honorary doctor of laws degree in 1960. In presenting it, Dr. Edward Hall, Western's president at the time, said:

"We honor Gregory Clark for the sheer pleasure which he gives to people. We honor him too, as an interpreter of people. We pay tribute to him as a people's philosopher . . . Truly a king-size Leprechaun."

Mr. Clark was born in Toronto on Sept. 25, 1892, to Thomas Joseph Clark and the former Sarah Louisa Greig.

He joined the editorial staff of The Star after attending Harbord Collegiate and University of Toronto, which he left after failing his first-year studies twice.

Clark suffered a heart attack in July, 1963, shortly after the death of his wife Helen.

By late 1970 his daily column no longer appeared but his articles were still featured in Weekend about once a month.

In an interview last year, Clark said he had decided to take a sabbatical leave starting in September, 1975. He said he struggled with writer's block since he received an honorary doctor of letters degree from the University of Toronto in June, 1975.

"I went through some kind of emotional disturbance, and from that day I haven't been able to write a line," he said.

After Mr. Clark had failed his first year twice at the university, he was told to stay out for at least a year. When he returned 64 years later for his honorary degree, he said:

"I think I have more letters after my name that I have in it."

Besides the honorary degrees from the two universities, Mr. Clark received the Military Cross during the First World War and was made an officer of The Order of the British Empire for his work as a war correspondnent for The Star in the Second World War and an officer of the Order of Canada when it was first awarded in 1967.

In 1965 he was chosen first honorary life member of the Newspaper Hall of Fame and was awarded the Stephen Leacock Medal for Humor for one of his books, Gregory Clark War Stories.

Two collections of his stories—So What and Which We Did—were published before the Second World War with Mr. Frise's illustrations.

He published other books in later years including The Best of Gregory Clark and Greg's Choice.

But Greg was more than a writer. Fishermen and hunters, bird-watchers and program chairman who sought the best speakers for their club meetings also called him friend.

Although Clark was known in his later years for feature writing, he also was a senior reporter during his many years at The Star and shared bylines on major stories of his day with such men as the late Fred Griffin and the late Matthew Halton.

Although he talked to kings and commoners, to field marshals and privates, to the pillars of the professional world and to the derelicts along Skid Road, he once said:

"In the great campaigns of war and peace it is the privates, corporals and sergeants who eventually have to carry out the hard work—not the generals. If you cultivate their respect and friendship, they won't let you down."

He was in Paterson, N.J., for the trial in 1935 of Bruno Hauptmann, the kidnap-slayer of Charles Lindbergh's son. He went to Nova Scotia in 1937 to report the Moose River mine disaster.

NEW RADAR FINDS SHIPS BY HEAT

TORONTO (CP) — A $500,000, infra-red radar, able to detect objects at sea missed by conventional devices, has been developed by Spar Aerospace Products.

The manufacturer says the radar is three to five years ahead of research in other western countries.

The U.S. Navy and North Atlantic Treaty Organization are interested in the detector, which sweeps low over the water and picks up heat emissions from warships, missiles and planes. Conventional radar may miss detection of low-flying or moving objects.

Royal introduces an independent arbitrator system.

NOW AVAILABLE!
Ask your independent agent about our new AUTOSHIELD plan.

At Royal, we make insurance work like a bridge. If you have a loss, we want you to have the means to replace it quickly.
But sometimes it happens there's a disagreement over the proposed settlement and you don't feel satisfied.
That's why Royal introduces a "first" to Canadian insurance: an independent arbitrator system called the ROYAL-AIDE PLAN. You may obtain details of the Plan from your local Royal office.
It provides an independent decision expert that our personal auto and property policyholders can choose themselves—to arbitrate those disagreements where neither the validity of the policy nor the good will of the insured is in dispute, and bring them to a speedy, satisfactory solution.
You'll probably never need ROYAL-AIDE.
But it's good to know when we say insurance works like a bridge, we'll do everything we can to make sure it keeps working that way.

Margaret Charms Washington

WASHINGTON (CP) — With a wide smile to match the laughing Mickey Mouse figures on her dress, Margaret Trudeau charmed an elegant audience Wednesday night at the opening of an exhibit of Canadian paintings.

Introduced as the first official state visitor from Canada since the Carter administration took office, the prime minister's wife won warm applause from the select audience of 225 people after a three-minute speech in which she said: "I don't feel any border between our two countries, our two cultures."

She stumbled a few times in her remarks, cutting short one convoluted sentence with a smiling "I'm sorry." But she kept her poise as she paid tribute to the Hirshhorn museum for presenting the exhibit of paintings.

Canadians, she said, appreciate such interest in their work.

Her visit, which ends tonight, also included calls Wednesday on Joan Mondale, wife of the vice-president, and President Jimmy Carter's wife Rosalynn.

Mrs. Trudeau's 42-minute White House stop was partially taken over by Amy Carter's return from school. The president's nine-year-old daughter brought home a photo of the White House she had taken and printed as part of her Grade 4 work.

Mrs. Trudeau, who recently began a two-year photography course in Ottawa, was shown the photo.

Throughout the day, she found swarms of news photographers waiting for her at every stop, an indication that the Feb. 21-22 visit by her and her husband to the U.S. capital may draw heavy media attention.

As she and Mrs. Mondale strolled through the art exhibit, engaging in animated conversation with each other and with other guests, Mrs. Trudeau joked with some of the photographers.

Mrs. Mondale, who at one point expressed a desire to come to Canada on a fishing trip, left the exhibit reception early to see Carter's television appearance.

Mrs. Trudeau, who took a break to see part of the president's speech, pronounced it "very good" and returned to the reception for a while longer.

PROBE BEGINS INTO KENNEDY, KING KILLINGS

WASHINGTON (WP) — The House voted Wednesday night to restore its investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy and civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. but put the probe on two months' probation.

Revival of the inquiry, approved 237 to 164, gives the House Select Committee on Assassinations until March 31 to work out a palatable budget and to adopt rules that will safeguard the rights of witnesses and others who might become targets of the inquiry.

Egypt Aid Wins Backing

WASHINGTON (WP) — A house subcommittee unanimously approved $190 million in emergency aid to Egypt Wednesday after being told it will help to shore up President Anwar Sadat in "A real hour of need."

Assistant secretary of state Alfred L. Atherton said Egypt had asked for new help from the United States as well as other donor countries after the serious riots two weeks ago against Sadat's austerity program, which included increases in the price of food, soap, cigarettes and other staples.

"This is important to the strengthening of President Sadat, who in turn is important to the peace process in the Middle East," Atherton told the foreign operations subcommittee of the House appropriations committee

The funds involved are being transferred from long-term development projects previously approved by Congress to commodity shipments which can be supplied, and noticed, quickly. The executive branch is required to notify Congress before making such shifts.

"Egypt is the key country in getting negotiations started (on an overall Middle East settlement) and in making progress in those negotiations," Atherton told the subcommittee.

WARNKE HEADS ARMS CONTROL

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Jimmy Carter announced Wednesday that he will nominate former assistant defence secretary Paul C. Warnke to be director of the arms control and disarmament agency and the United States' special negotiator at the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT).

Carter also announced that he will name Washington lawyer Clifford L. Alexander Jr. to be secretaty of the U.S. Army. Alexander, 43, an unsuccessful candidate for mayor of the District of Columbia, would be the first black to head the army.

U.S. War Veterans Sue Over Carter's Pardon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group including Medal of Honor winners and former prisoners of war filed suit in federal court today challenging the legality of President Carter's pardon for U.S. military draft evaders.

The suit said the pardon is vague and ambiguous, illegally delegates the president's constitutional pardon authority to Attorney-General Griffin Bell and violates federal laws governing vitizenship.

Carter and Bell were named defendents in the suit.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court by the Foundation of Law and Society, a Washington-based, public-interest law foundation.

Members of Congress who joined in the suit included Representatives George Hansen (Rep. Idaho) and Larry McDonald (Dem. Ga.).

The suit said Carter's order pardoning draft evaders who fled the country is void because he lacks authority to restore full political rights to persons who are not citizens of the United States and that the law says that a person who leaves the U.S. to avoid the draft loses his citizenship.

"The executive order invades the legislative perogatives by directing the attorney-general to discontinue investigations and prosecutions of violators of the Military Selective Service Act," the suit charges.

Jubilee Marked with Paintings

elizabeth forbes

As we head into the second month of 1977, there are indications that celebration of the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II will be the "jubilant event" (as I've seen it described) of the year.

Every Commonwealth country — and indeed other countries in the free world — will mark the anniversary in one way or another. Plans and projects have already surfaced in many of these countries.

In Canada one of the most interesting I have read of or heard about is the Silver Jubilee project of the I.O.D.E. (Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire).

This project will see 37 watercolors and drawings by Winifred Petchey Marsh presented to Canada's newest museum, the Territorial Central Museum at Yellowknife, N.W.T.

A collection that depicts "the now disappeared culture of the Padlimiut Tribe of the Cariboo Eskimo," we're told in a recent issue of Echoes, the national I.O.D.E. magazine.

Mrs. Marsh came from England in 1933 as a bride, to live in the Arctic, where her husband Donald (later to be Anglican Bishop of the Arctic) had been a missionary to the Cariboo Indians for seven years.

Born in London, England, she was a graduate teacher of art and had worked in a girls' school over there.

However, her deep ambition was to become a missionary. So, in 1932, she attended college for crash medical, dental and midwifery courses.

A year later she married Donald Marsh and returned with him to his Eskimo Point mission, on the northwest shore of Hudson Bay.

Mrs. Marsh was the first white woman to live in the Arctic north of Churchill, and her knowledge of art gave her "a special kind of entry in understanding the native people."

She assisted in teaching in missions and day schools while, at the same time, portraying in watercolors not only the landscape but the people and their way of life.

It is these paintings that the I.O.D.E. will present to the new territorial museum at Yellowknife "as a fitting tribute to Her Majesty as she celebrates her Silver Jubilee."

For this purpose a fund has been established and a goal of $30,000 set.

A goal that I.O.D.E. chapters in every province of Canada will help to achieve through donations to the fund from Silver Jubilee displays, observances, teas, luncheons, balls and other special events.

It's interesting to find that when Donald Marsh was appointed Bishop of the Arctic and he and his wife moved to the administrative office in Toronto, Mrs. Marsh fulfilled a wish to provide a home for transient missionaries, and to bring all workers together into an Arctic family.

From this work and through her travels with the Bishop to the northernmost settlements, she has earned the title "Grandma Arctic."

Bishop Marsh died in 1973 and Mrs. Marsh now continues her commitment by conducting a ministry to women as a team member of the Invitation To Live crusades.

It is also interesting to know that reproductions of the paintings that will go to the Yellowknife museum appear in People of the Willow, a book written by Mrs. Marsh and recently printed.

In it her talent and love have combined to bring to life the story of strength and simplicity inherent in the way of life of the Palimiut Tribe of the Cariboo Eskimos.

The original paintings are "a unique and beautiful archive of a world that has since disappeared," the editor of Echoes (Winifred M. Anderson) writes.

"In them the people, their homes, their children, their hunting and fishing, their migrations, their dances and costumes, and their family life are all portrayed with the sympathy and sensitivity of one who loved the Inuit and for whom this record was both an expression of that love and an act of Christian devotion."

Strangely, for nearly half a century, those paintings remained unknown except to a few museum curators and to the artist's family and friends.

Then, in the summer of 1976, they were exhibited to much acclaim by the McMichael Canadian Collection at Kleinburg, Ontario.

Now, by presenting the entire collection to the new Territorial Central Museum, the I.O.D.E. is ensuring that "It will continue to be a complete element of Canadian art and thus an important factor in education."

Postscript — Let me remind you that it was on February 6, 1952, that Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, came to the Throne.

Now, as the Echoes magazine editor says, "in this year 1977, the people of the British Commonwealth can commemorate her 25th anniversary by honoring a reign which has been a lesson in stability and dignity in a world beleagured by dissention and disaster!"

Happy birthday to me! It was one year ago we started this column. From the many comments we've heard I know many of you found it useful.

How is your tie situation? This year some interesting new things are appearing in neckwear. Square end ties are going to be seen this spring. The square end tie is definitely the rage in fashionable European circles and we know of two Canadian manufacturers who will be introducing it within the next few months.

Another interesting facet to the tie industry is the recognition that younger men are turning to a dressier look. As a result the spring season will be shaped by a subtle return to conservative fashion.

There will be a greater interest in medium colour tones rather than the lighter shades of past years. Look also for geometric stripes and special panel effects.

More well dressed men will be featuring pocket puffs co-ordinated to their neckwear. Puffs will be either matching or contrasting to give a very dressy touch.

We are professionals!

INMATES' WIVES SUFFER OUTSIDE

MONTREAL (CP) — Society turns a cold shoulder on women involved with prisoners and the experience of doing time on the outside is sometimes harder than spending a term behind bars, says Marilyn Finesilver, a case worker with the John Howard Society.

"The families of prisoners are vicitmized in at least the same way as their husbands, if not more," Miss Finesilver says.

"Landlords, welfare agencies and schools are hard on them. The whole attitude is one of rejection."

She says the hardships are not just financial.

"The emotional and social implications of his being in prison are tremendous."

The disappointment of being rejected by friends and family members who consider a woman tainted can be overwhelming, she says.

"At least you find out who your friends really are."

Miss Finesilver has recently started a group for wives and girlfriends of incarcerated men with the aim of getting them together and encouraging them to support each other.

"The social stigma attached to anything to do with prisons is immense and most wives find themselves living in complete isolation."

Finding out there are scores of other women facing similar problems every day is a source of consolation, she says.

She wants the group to concentrate on trying to effect change, "because sitting around commiserating with each other all day won't make the reality of their lives any better."

Pot-Au-Feu Perfect for Kitchen Meal

HEADLINERS and George Fayad Inc. Hair Designers

craig claiborne

One effect of the cooking revolution that has occurred in America during the past decade has been the shift in many homes from living room to kitchen as a focal point for entertaining. There are some dishes in this world that are particularly suited to being served in the kitchen. One of these is a great personal favorite, a pot-au-feu, which is a whole meal — several meats and lots of vegetables — cooked in a kettle. The basic difficulty in serving a pot-au-feu is getting such a variety of foods to the table hot. With the guests in the kitchen to help themselves as the vegetables are lifted from the pot and the meat is carved, this problem is enormously and logically simplified. The pot-au-feu whose recipe appears on this page is special. It contains, in addition to beef, a stuffed breast of veal.

POT-AU-FEU WITH STUFFED VEAL BREAST

1 five-and-three-quarter-pound breast of veal with a pocket for stuffing
1 tablespoon butter
½ pound button mushrooms, sliced
2 cloves garlic, thinly sliced
1½ bay leaves
3 springs fresh thyme
¼ pound chicken livers
1 cup loosely packed parsley leaves (the tops of about 20 sprigs)
1 large egg
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Three-quarters pound ground pork
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
4 pounds short ribs of beef with bone in one or two pieces, or use brisket of beef
7 quarts water
10 peppercorns
3 allspice
3 whole cloves
10 whole parsley sprigs
1 large onion, peeled and split in half
2 Heads of green cabbage, about one and one-quarter pounds each
1 whole stalk of celery
1½ pounds fresh turnips, about five
Three-quarters pound carrots, preferably small 4 leeks, trimmed
Tomato sauce (see recipe)
Coarse salt
Assorted mustards, preferably imported
Cornichons (imported small, sour gherkins).

1. Have the veal brest ready and set aside.

2. Heat the butter in a large saucepan and add the mushrooms. Cook, stirring, until they give up their liquid. Add the garlic, half a bay leaf and two sprigs of thyme, and cook, stirring often, about five minutes. Remove and discard the bay leaf and thyme.

3. Spoon and scrape the mixture into the container of a food processor or grind it with a food grinder. Add the livers, the parsley leaves, egg and salt and peppr to taste, and process and puree coursely, or grind it. Add the ground pork and bread crumbs and process briefly. If a grinder is used, simply blend all the ingredients together without grinding the pork and crumbs.

4. Stuff the veal breast with this mixture and sew the opening securely.

5. Add the beef to a large kettle and add water to cover. Bring to the boil and simmer about one minute. Drain and run under cold water to chill. Rinse the kettle well and return the beef to it. Add the seven quarts of water and remaining sprig of thyme. Add the stuffed breast of veal, salt, remaining bay leaf, peppercorns, allspice, cloves and 10 whole parsley springs. Cover and bring to the boil. Let cook one hour.

6. Meanwhile, add the onion, cut-side down, to a heavy skillet and let it cook until it is burnt on the cut surface. Add this to the kettle.

7. Pull off and sicard the tough outer leaves of the cabbages. Cut away and discard the cores. When the beef and veal have cooked one hour, add the cabbages.

8. Cut off the tops of the celery ribs about six inches from the base. Reserve the tops for another use. Cut the bottom and the ribs into quarters. Rinse well all over until clean. Tie the ribs with string. Add them to the kettle. After the cabbage and celery have been added, continue cooking 30 minutes.

9. Peel the turnips and scrape the carrots and add them to the kettle. Split the leeks almost but not through the root end. Wash thoroughly between the leaves. Tie with string and add to the kettle. Cover and cook one hour longer.

10. When ready to serve, slice the beef and beal breast (removing the string) as necessary. Serve everything hot with hot tomato sauce, coarse salt, various mustards and cornichons on the side.

Yield: Twelve or more servings.

TOMATO SAUCE

5 cups tomatoes
4 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons chopped onion
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
salt and freshly ground pepper.

1. Put the tomatoes through a food mill or chop them finely.

2. Melt one tablespoon butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook until wilted. Add the tomatoes and salt and pepper to taste and bring to the boil. Cook, stirring often, until the sauce has been reduced to about three cups.

3. Swirl in the remaining butter and serve piping hot.

Yield: About three cups.

Spaniard Makes Real Omelette

Mary Moore

The Spaniards are condescending to us. What we call Spanish Omelette (with creole-like tomato sauce) is not REAL Spanish Omelette.

My friend Doris El had a Spanish gentleman as a guest who told her how to make a Real Spanish Omelette and made it for her in his apartment. He said it could be served cold and was often taken to a picnic in Spain.

REAL SPANISH OMELETTE
(Srves 2; Hot or Cold)

medium potato, pared and sliced thinly
½ Spanish onion, sliced thinly
4 eggs
½ to ¾ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tsp. olive oil
3 tsp. cold water

In a medium sized pan, preferably with sloping sides, heat oil. Over low heat add potato slices in 3 layers, covered with sliced onions, cover with lid and cook slowly until potato is tender but not browned.

Beat the eggs in a bowl. Add salt and pepper.

When vegetables are soft turn heat up to "medium" and pour eggs all over. As egg mixture cooks, lift edges with spatula and let liquid egg run underneath. When egg is nearly cooked but still a little runny on top lift edges with spatula and pour one teaspoon cold water under omelette in three separate places using 3 teaspoons cold water in all. Cover pan tightly and cook 2 or 3 minutes longer — omelette should rise and should be served folded over — immediately if to be served hot. If to be served cold transfer to plate to cool.

I have suffered with migraine all my life. I think I've seen more than 30 doctors. Each one gives me a pill that seems to help for a short while. Then I'm back again with my painful headaches. If you had these headaches, what would you do about it?—Mr. R.S.

Dear Mr. S.:

The first thing I would NOT do is bounce around from doctor to doctor without giving one of them a real chance to study me and to treat me with some degree of continuity.

Dr. David Codden, director of the Headache Clinic at the Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City, is a national authority on the understanding of migraine and other forms of headache. He believes that it is the impatience of people who want immediate answers to all of their headache problems that keeps them in a constant state of running from doctor to doctor. Only with an intensive program that studies all the variables that can be involved in the production of a headache can any consistent help be expected.

Food allergy, environmental factors, severe emotional stress, hormone imbalance and blood deficiencies are among the factors that can trigger a migraine headache.

It is obvious, when there are so many possible factors involved, that time becomes a most important element in the solution of this problem.

Today, there is no longer a need for a sense of hopelessness about this form of headache. For there now are drugs such as methysergide which are effective in preventing the onset of migraine. This and other drugs, when carefully chosen, are safe and effective.

A large number of new antidepressant drugs are contributing to the relief of migraine sufferers.

There are now many headache centers which devote themselves exclusively to the physical and the emotional implications of headaches. In your very city of Chicago, there is one of the most famous centers for the study of headaches. Dr. Seymour Diamond, at the Chicago Medical School, has contributed enormously to the better understanding of the factors involved in the prevention and in the control of this debilitating condition.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . Family tensions at dinnertime interfere with proper digestion. Dinnertime should be a period of relaxation.

Every year more than 400,000 Canadians become ill from food poisoning.

The 16-page bilingual booklet "Food Safety" discusses some of the ways in which food poisoning can be prevented. It also contains accounts of actual occurrences which have led to food poisonings.

The booklet explains, for instance, that food poisoning results from eating food which contains a large number of harmful bacteria. Such bacteria are usually killed by high temperatures but not by freezing. Freezing only prevents them from multiplying.

There is also a list of potentially unsafe foods in which harmful bacteria grow rapidly, unless these foods are kept properly heated or cooled.

Grazing Cow Just as Good

Q. In answering a recent question, you said that there was really no nutritional difference between organically raised foods and those grown with commercial fertilizers. However I've heard that grazing animals can develop dietary deficiencies as a result of a lack of nutrients in the soil. Can you explain this?

A. It is true that animals have developed some nutritional deficiencies by grazing on land where the soil lacked essential trace minerals. Once the deficiency is recognized, however, the missing nutrients can be given to the animals.

It is also true that soil-related deficiency has been known to occur in man, but only rarely. Many years ago it was discovered that goiter developed in man (and in cattle) in regions where the iodine content of the soil was low. Although present in plants, iodine does not seem to be required by them, so they can grow in soil that doesn't contain iodine.

Once the cause of goiter was recognized, the addition of iodine to table salt (to feed for animals) provided a simple, safe solution to the problem.

Today, since we have a national food supply and people eat a great variety of foods grown in many different areas, such a soil-related deficiency is unlikely to occur.

We might point out, incidentally, that commercial farmers do use large amounts of organic matter. In fact, a recent review by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council on the subject of soil fertility and the nutritive value of crops pointed out that most commercial farms use amounts of organic residues such as corn, straw or even livestock manure that often exceed the harvested portion of the crop. These residues are worked into the land where they are decayed by bacteria and improve the physical properties of the soil. But as far as the plants or animals are concerned, it does not matter whether they get the nutrients they need from organic or inorganic sources.

Q. Unfortunately, my husband has cancer. His loss of appetitie really worries me, and I wondered if you might have some suggestions about what I can do to encourage him to eat more.

A. Loss of appetite, or anorexia, is a common problem in patients with cancer, and there are many reasons why it occurs. But evidence indicates that individuals with cancer who are well-nourished are better able to withstand various treatments, so it is particularly important to encourage them to eat.

Recently, Dr. William DeWys and nurse Karen Walter reported the results of a study of abnormalities of taste sensation in cancer patients at Rochester General Hospital in Rochester, N.Y. The study involved personal interviews about taste changes and special taste tests using solutions that tasted sweet, sour, bitter or salty.

On interview, 25 patients reported a decreased sense of taste, and 16 specifically reported an aversion for meat. The decreased taste symptom was linked to a decrease in the ability to recognize a sweet taste. The aversion to meat seemed to be caused by a heightened sensitivity to a bitter taste.

The study showed that abnormalities of taste may well play a role in anorexia associated with cancer. If food doesn't taste good, you aren't so hungry.

Using more sweetening agents and increased seasonings can be helpful in patients with a decreased sense of taste. And in the study, many patients who could not tolerate meat, were able to eat poultry or fish. Others who could not accept any of these foods were usually able to eat eggs or cheese.

While some of these ideas may be helpful to you, we must urge you and your husband to discuss the anorexia with your physician.

Woodward's

indoor gardens

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

As a special gift to our readers, here is Mother Earth's Plant Calendar for 1977 — in two installments — excerpted from "Mother Earth's Houseplant Coloring Album."

JANUARY: Make a New Year's resolution to take good care of plants all year long! Find the right place for plants received for Christmas and give them all names. Water moderately until spring, and learn their needs. No need to feed, but mist those that need it.

FEBRUARY: Give your sweetheart a plant for Valentine's Day — maybe a "string of hearts" (rosary vine)? Plants still resting, but gently stirring. Start a Plant Calender to keep track of feedings.

MARCH: Get plant supplies organized — plant food, vitamins, scissors, indoor potting mix. Plants are awakening. Give them vitamin-hormone with their water. Fertilize half-strength March 21, the first day of spring.

APRIL: Don't be a fool, love a plant. Spring is here, and the plants know it! Take cuttings for Mother's Day gift plants. Transplant NOW those who need it. Watch out! Here they grow!

MAY: Give mom a plant for Mother's Day. All mothers love plants, especially Mother Earth. Feed and water your plants, bearing in mind that the warmer the weather, the more care and water your plants will require.

JUNE: Father's Day. Don't Discriminate. Dad loves plants, too, but better make it something hassle-free. Check soil levels, add where necessary. Feed and water according to each plant's needs. Aerate plants by gently "tilling" in the soil with a fork to get air to the roots. Pinch the plants back.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: We hear so much these days about women's liberation and the joys of the career woman versus the "slavery" of housework. This is puzzling.

Part of what attracted me to my husband was what I thought was his belief about the basic old-fashioned attitude that "a woman's place is in the home." Now that we're married, I find that he is just as "modern" as the next fellow. He says, "Any woman who stays at home all day is lazy."

He has no idea of what is involved in housework; he thinks I watch TV all day. When I suggest that we take turns doing cooking and cleaning, he says, "No way—that's woman's work!"

The point of my letter is: Just who is "liberated"? What kind of garbage have women been programmed to believe when they make statements like: "I work because I enjoy getting out of the house; housework's a drag!" So who does their housework for them while they're at the office?

Every employed woman I know does her housework when she gets home at night after eight hours of "office" work. And while she's doing housework, her husband is drinking a beer, watching TV, reading or sleeping.

When advocates of Women's Lib interview working wives and mothers, they often paint a rosy picture. These women should be interviewed when they've dragged themselves to work after a night of staying up with a sick child, then they'd hear such statements as, "I wish I didn't have to work — but Charlie wants a boat just as big as Mr. Jones' boat." — PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: I don't have any statistics on how many women work in order to provide their husbands with bigger boats, but those who do are already sunk.

DEAR ABBY: I have a distressing problem that needs an early answer. My niece's husband gets his "fun" from tickling his 4-year-old daughter until the child is exhausted. The mother says she is helpless and can't stop it. My husband has talked seriously with the father, describing his action as torture. But our nephew says it is just "fun," and he does this continually.

Please hurry with your advice—our nephew reads your column. — KENTUCKY MOTHER.

DEAR KENTUCKY: Your nephew is unwittingly approaching the danger zone of child abuse. He should be warned by a doctor that this form of "fun" has ominous overtones.

Act on this advice immediately. If I knew his address, I would!

No Rosy Picture For Working Wives

DEAR ABBY: Writing to Dear Abby seems to be the best way to get this message to millions of people, so here goes:

When calling a senior citizen, please let the phone ring at least seven or eight times before hanging up. We oldsters sometimes can't get to the phone in three or four rings. (We're not exactly teenagers, and we don't move so fast anymore.)

It is so frustrating for us to hear the phone ring, then get nothing but a dial tone by the time we get to it. As for me, I keep wondering all day long who called me and what they wanted.

I don't express myself too well, Abby, so put this into your own words and get the message across, and we senior citizens will bless you. — SLOW SENIOR.

DEAR SLOW SENIOR: Your words express your thoughts perfectly, and here they are.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The story of the wooden horse that the Greeks built, and which the Trojans took into their city of Troy, is well known. Later that night, Greek soldiers emerged from the horse and opened the city gates to the Greek army, who then proceeded to sack the city.

At the bridge table, during the daily skirmishes that take place between declarer and the defenders, this wooden horse has its counterpart time and time again. And there are those who have not learned the lesson that history has taught. A case in point would be our East defender in today's deal. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

On West's jack of clubs opening lead, East signalled encouragement with the nine-spot, as declarer won the trick with his king. The ten of hearts was then led. East declining to take his ace. Then came the nine of hearts, with dummy's eight being played. Once again East refused to win the trick.

From East's position, with West having followed suit to both heart leads, he knew the South had no more hearts. And hence, by declining to win his heart ace, he knew that he would prevent the establishment and cashing of the board's hearts.

With the nine of hearts winning, South next led a low spade to dummy's ace, after which he returned dummy's remaining spade. When play had ended, South had made four spade tricks, two hearts, one diamond and two clubs, for a total of nine tricks.

East should not have been deceived by South's play of the heart suit. He should have captured the second heart lead. Surely East should have figured out that if declarer wanted to establish the board's hearts, he would have overtaken the nine with the jack in order to keep on playing hearts. Hence declarer's failure to have overtaken should have indicated to East that South was hoping his nine-spot would win the trick.

Had East taken the second heart lead and returned the club queen; declarer would have gone down, since the spade finesse for his ninth trick would have been unsuccessful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar aspects indicate conflict with family member, but ultimate "working out" of differences. Property, taxes, values are spotlighted. Gemini, Virgo play roles in scenario. Member of opposite sex asks where do I stand and expects more than a rhetorical answer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hold off on short trips, if possible. Money and relatives dont mix at this time. Know it and act accordingly. Legal maneuver works in your favor. What appears a setback will boomerang. You'll benefit. Home adjustment is indicated. Taurus, Libra figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): What might seem like a "financial pinch" is merely a delay, a gathering in of forces, a way of flashing a caution light. Know it and act accordingly. Get promises in writing. Be aware of legal technicalities. Now wise to base actions on assumptions obtain factual information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for added responsibility, possible promotion, request for participation in civic project. Be confident. Communicate with professional superior. Adhere to rules, regulations. Cancer, Capricorn persons are in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message for valid hint. Enlarge horizons. Potential is great — know it and live up to it. You complete meaningful assignment. Individual who is aggressive strives to "show you the way." You, with asserting needs, desires and by outlining goals. You'll understand!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Highlight personality, appearance, original approach to people, methods, concepts, tasks. Be independent enough to start project on your own. Definite steps can be taken to assure greater security. Build on base that has been tested for durability.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Relatives, home and domestic affairs could dominate. Travel will not "free" you from messages, last-minute requests. Key is to keep affairs simple — and to laugh at your own foibles. If flexible, you gain. Otherwise, there is delay — for no good reason.

IF FEBRUARY 4th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are direct, independent, original, progressive, inventive, stubborn and were "on your own" at a relatively early age. You break rules, smash icons and create policies which result in controversy as well as advancement. Scorpio, Taurus persons play important roles in your life. May should be one of your most significant months of 1977, a year which sees you having more of a social life, being happier, travelling more and "putting on weight."

Cruel Campaign Aimed At Ousting Fire Chief

BURNABY (CP) — In a job where team-work is more instinct than conscious skill, Thomas Nairn stands in curious counterpoint.

For more than seven months, Nairn has been the titular head of the fire department here.

But he is not a member of the 190-man team of firefighters which protects the community. It is not by personal choice. The men under Chief Nairn refuse to acknowledge his position. He is an outsider.

A veteran firefighter with 30 years experience dating back to 1947 in Dunfermline, Scotland, Nairn quit has nine-year job as Yukon fire marshal to accept the Burnaby post.

He won the job over 26 other applicants, including four senior members of the Burnaby fire department.

Since he assumed his post in July, 1976, Nairn has been subjected to a petty, sometimes cruel campaign of harassment designed to drive him out of the job.

He is shunned by the men he is supposed to command. His orders are virtually ignored. He works in isolation in a job where the team player is the rule, not the exception.

The squabble boiled into the open last week when Burnaby Mayor Tom Constable sacked three of the fire department's four assistant chiefs for refusing to sign a letter pledging loyalty to Nairn. The fourth is on holidays.

The matter now is before the B.C. Labor Relations Board, which earlier rejected a firefighters' union submission that Nairn's appointment contravened the collective agreement with the municipality.

Arbitrator Ron Bone said some progress was made in the dispute after six hours of meetings on Wednesday and more meetings are scheduled today.

As far as Constable is concerned, it's a one-issue dispute.

"We're deciding whether the firefighters' union or the elected council is running this municipality," he said in an interview.

The Burnaby local of the International Firefighters Association does not agree.

Gordon Anderson, association vice-president, said the appointment of an outsider as chief is damaging to morale. Passing over senior members of the department squelches career incentive.

Bill Copeland, president of the Burnaby Firefighters' Association, is more direct.

"Nairn's appointment is the most destructive thing that's ever happened to our department," said Copeland, a fire captain. "Nobody's interested in upgrading himself. Where's the incentive?"

Although unholding the hiring of Nairn last October, the Labor Relations Board criticized the municipality for not consulting with the firefighters' union before altering traditional hiring policy.

The board also disagreed with the municipality's argument that Nairn won the post because his administrative skills were needed to handle a department with an annual budget of more than $4 million.

The board said testimony disclosed that the chief is seen by his men as a fireman first and an administrator second.

It said firemen must have complete confidence in the person issuing orders and added that the men believe they can have that only in a person they've observed under stress.

By the time the board decision came down, firemen had collected more than 20,000 names on a petition opposing Nairn's appointment.

The harassment of the new chief intensified and as one fireman observed: "He's an outcast. He's totally isolated from the troops."

Following the board ruling, council changed Nairn's title to director of fire services in charge of long-range planning. Deputy chief Lawrence Buckley, who was passed over in the hiring, was made chief of operations responsible for the day-to-day running of the department.

Nairn does not attend fires. One fireman said that if he did, his orders would probably be ignored.

Vancouver Dead At Night

VANCOUVER (CP)—The downtown area of Canada's third-largest city is overcrowded by day and dead at night, the chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District said Wednesday.

Mayor Jack Campbell of Port Coquitlam told downtown businessmen "I used to drive downtown once a week."

"Now I only come when it is absolutely necessary.

"You're going to choke to death. I spend more time looking for a parking space here than I do driving to town from Port Coquitlam (15 miles east of Vancouver)."

Campbell called for wide-open sotre hours downtown and more housing attached to commercial buildings in an effort to revitalize the city after working hours.

Testimony of Murder 'Tainted'

NANAIMO (CP) — Opposing counsel in the B.C. Supreme Court murder trial of John David Ross told jurors Wednesday that their deliberations might revolve more around the credibility of the witnesses rather than that of the accused.

"We still may not have heard the truth," said defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood.

He and Crown counsel George MacMinn presented their closing arguments in the case in which Ross, 34, is charged with the Nov. 1, 1975 fatal shooting of Malcolm Preston Cunningham, 23, of Victoria.

During the trial which began Jan. 10, court was told that police mistreated witnesses with threats, long periods of unrelenting interrogation and offered them bribes.

Owen-Flood, citing police treatment of witnesses, said as a result of this treatment their testimony was "so tainted, so awful, you would be unsafe to hang a dog on it."

He added there was little likelihood that the threatened witnesses were telling the truth in all cases.

Witness Gordon Caldwell was interrogated without break for 23 hours and was offered money and immunity from prosecution on drug charges, the trial was told.

The defence counsel said police offered Caldwell $50,000, adding "the evidence you get from such people is not worth a pinch of anything, not worth a damn."

MacMinn questioned the credibility of witness Russell Mutter.

Mutter originally gave police a statement in which he implicated Ross in the murder. At this trial, Mutter repudiated that statement when he testified that another witness, Rodney Steigenberger, had confessed to him (Mutter) about killing Cunningham.

MacMinn referred to Mutter's testimony about a rifle reported stolen.

Mutter had testified that the rifle used in the killing, his gun, was reported stolen Nov. 3, 1975. However, testimony by Victoria police officers indicated the theft report was made Nov. 2, 1975.

A copy of police records also showed the report was made Nov. 2.

Showing the document to the jury, MacMinn said "this document speaks for itself."

"You will have no difficulty to conclude the testimony Russell Mutter gave to this court is untrue," said MacMinn.

Shah Releases 317 Prisoners

TEHRAN (Reuter) — The Shah of Iran has granted amnesties to 317 prisoners convicted of various offences by military tribunals, the official Radio Iran said Wednesday. The radio gave no other details but said the group will be freed Thursday to mark the 57-year-old monarch's escape from an assassination attempt in 1948.

Business Con Man Guilty

RICHMOND (CP) — A man who bilked businessmen out of more than $160,000 during 1975 pleaded guilty to six counts of fraud and two of theft when he appeared in provincial court here Wednesday.

Narvin Wray Clarence Edwardson, 45, was remanded for three weeks for sentencing.

Prosecutor Bill Hardey said the charges resulted from six business deals in Penticton, one in Victoria and one in Calgary. On one occasion, Edwardson purchased a Penticton car dealership for $17,500, court was told. He handed the owner a cheque but, before sealing the deal, persuaded the owner to hand back the money plus another $10,000 to invest in property Edwardson said he owned in Phoenix. The car dealer later found there was no property in Phoenix.

On another occasion, Edwardson convinced two investors to give him $30,000 for the purchase of the Marlborough Hotel in Winnipeg. Edwardson didn't proceed with the purchase. He used $15,000 to buy a house for himself, paid off a bank loan and bought other goods.

One theft charge resulted from Edwardson taking on management of a Calgary apartment block. Edwardson, who was authorized to sign cheques for the owners, spent $59,000 of their money in three months. His normal management fee for the period was $4,000.

Jewelry Theft 'Clear'

Circumstantial evidence was enough Wednesday to convict a former Alert Bay man of smashing into a beauty parlor to steal costume jewelery.

"Seldom does a clearer case come before the courts," said Judge E. J. C. Stewart in county court where he found George Alex Charlie, 23, of 859 Cormorant, guilty of breaking, entering and theft at The Haircutters, 1036 Hillside, last June 22.

Stewart agreed with defence counsel Barry Gates that evidence was largely circumstantial, "but so compelling and persuasive" in the absence of an explanation by the accused for the events described shortly after 12:30 a.m. the morning of June 22.

Charlie was freed on his own recognizance and ordered to continue reporting to his bail officer weekly until he is sentenced March 1, the next available court day for Stewart in this area.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old man who kicked in a window at Paul's Restaurant, 1007 Douglas, winced Wednesday when ordered by Judge William Ostler to perform 150 hours of community service work.

James Roy Durant, who gave addresses of 52 Crease Avenue and 1409 Camosun, pleaded guilty in provincial court to mischief causing wilful damage.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Durant was walking north on Douglas and kicked in a window at the restaurant at about 12:30 a.m. City police arrested him shortly after with the assistance of a witness, Mulligan said. Durant told police he was drunk.

Ostler asked Durant if he realized how much people like him cost the public in increased insurance before handing down a suspended sentence, a year's probation and the community service work order.

In addition, Durant was ordered to pay for the broken window, valued at $130.

Paul Vincent Thompson, 22, was remanded in custody on charges of possession of marijuana and possession of the same substance for the purpose of trafficking.

Thompson, who gave police an address on Tait Street which he moved away from a week ago, was remanded until next Wednesday for election and plea.

He was denied bail following a hearing Wednesday afternoon.

An 18-year-old was remanded until Feb. 23 for sentence and a pre-sentence report ordered after he pleaded guilty to stealing a credit card, 19 counts of using a stolen credit card and one count of uttering a forged document.

Joseph Gerard Guenette, 1321 Richardson, admitted stealing the card Sept. 30 in Parksville, and to using it 19 times for a total of $584.88 as well as forging a $200 cheque.

Seven drivers were fined a total of $2,900 after pleading guilty to having a blood-alcohol content over .08.

They were: Raymond Donald Phelps, 38, of 2309 Bellamy, $600; Sidney William Jackson, 46, of 2790 Ronald Road, $500; Robert Eric Brown, 28, of 3230 Wishart, $400; William Michael Bartko, 48, of 1293 Camrose Crescent, $350; Charles Kim Cammiade, 20, of 269 Glenairlie Drive, $350; Thomas Keith Nichol, 34, of Sooke, $350; and Donald Gordon, 40, of 1776 Old Island Highway, $50. In addition to the fine, Gordon was placed on six months probation, and ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work and take the impaired driver's course.

A 52-year-old man charged with causing approximately $2,000 damage to a room in a Victoria hotel Jan. 2 was remanded until Friday so that a court psychiatrist could make an assessment.

John William Walsh, of no fixed address, was charged with wilful damage to a room in the Executive House, 777 Douglas.

Crop Rotation Key to Good Soil

The older handbooks on vegetable gardening stressed the importance of crop rotation. Elaborate drawings were included showing how rotation should be worked, plus several lists of alternates for the different areas.

In theory, crop rotation is essential for good soil management and maximum production.

It is based on the fact that different kinds of vegetables extract different nutrients from the soil. Root crops, for example, need potash, leaf crops more nitrogen, while seed crops must have high phosphoric acid for the production of flowers and, in turn, the seed.

By preparing one section with high nitrogen and growing leaf crops, the soil at the end of the season is suitable for root crops without any additional fertilizer. In this way there is less chance of any excessive build-up of one nutrient that could be harmful to production.

When most of the back garden is devoted to growing vegetables and small fruits it is reasonable to divide it into four sections, three of which are used for regular rotations, and the fourth for permanent plants such as bush fruits, strawberries, rhubarb and the asparagus bed.

But this is hardly practical when the vegetable area is small. There is no room for the isolation of three or four plots, each of sufficient size for the quantity of seed we may wish to sow. And what of the gardener who specializes in one or two vegetables to the exclusion of all others?

These factors have possibly been recognized by authors. The rotation chapter is missing from modern home gardening books.

Does this mean that the theory of crop rotation is no longer considered important? Or could it be that the increase in reports of poor seed germination, failure of pea crops, root crops making masses of foliage and roots not worth digging, and leaf crops running to seed, are the result of not knowing, or ignoring, the theory of rotation cropping?

To me, the second question contains the answer. Home gardeners in increasing numbers look upon a bag of fertilizer, regardless of the mix or the purpose for which it is designed, as the cure for all garden ills.

The possibility of a detrimental build-up of unused fertilizer salts is not recognized, nor is the type of fertilizer needed by each kind of vegetable common knowledge.

Agricultural bulletins, supposedly for the home gardener, cling tenaciously to farming practices, advocating the application of a highly concentrated fertilizer before the vegetable plot is tilled.

This may be practical on an acreage devoted to one kind of crop which needs that type of fertilizer, but it is questionable whether it is suited to a small home garden vegetable plot where a dozen unrelated kinds of vegetables are grown side-by-side.

While it may be convenient to buy a ready mixed balanced fertilizer of an all-purpose blend, which at best is a compromise, it is worth remembering that the separate ingredients can also be purchased and applied to suit the crop being grown.

The knowledge for using fertilizers that suit the different crops is readily available from library books, and this knowledge could make it possible to obtain better results with less cost.

In the smallest vegetable garden it is possible to practice a form of rotation by sowing vegetables in a different location each year and side-dressing with the fertilizer most needed.

When a record is kept of each year's layout we can alternate our plantings, deriving at least some of the benefits of rotation, and possibly reduce the vegetable problems that are so frequently reported. It certainly seems worth trying.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

'Dago Wop' Annoy

CANBERRA (Reuter) — A pocket Oxford English Dictionary tailored for Australia has drawn the ire of the country's community relations commissioner with its references to "dago" and "wop."

The dictionary defines "dago" as a term of contempt for a Spaniard, Portuguese or Italian, and "wop" as a slang and derogatory term for a mid-or south-European, especially Italian.

Commissioner Al Grassby also complained in a statement that England is mentioned in the dictionary seven times, but there are no references to Indonesians, Filipinos, Malaysians and Thais.

The only Brazilians in the dictionary are puts and the only natives of Argentina are ants, Grassby added.

He called for the withdrawal of the book.

Deputations from the Italian community and church organizations protested that the dictionary is guilty of racial discrimination.

David Cunningham, Melbourne manager of the Oxford University Press, said later the terms are clearly described as slang and there are no plans to withdraw the dictionary from circulation.

U.S. Energy Shortage to Stay

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter says energy shortages are permanent and Americans must make conservation their watchword, but he intends to find out which of the shortages are real and which are artificial.

Carter's pledge comes at a time when many people, out of work or worried about home heating because of the natural gas crisis, find it hard to believe reports that the devastating shortages were caused simply by demand outstripping supply.

"We will find out the difference between real shortages and artificial ones," the president said in his first "fireside chat" to the nation Wednesday night.

He outlined a three-phase battle against U.S. fuel problems, starting with his new emergency powers to deal with the gas crisis.

He said he will launch the second phase within the month, asking Congress to create an energy department and end present bureaucratic chaos, and the third phase on April 20 when he proposes a long-range energy policy.

The president listed conservation as the keystone in his long-range plan, saying the United States wastes — and could save — more energy than it now imports. He said increased coal production, with a new strip-mining law to protect the environment, and more solar power also will be important.

Meanwhile, new supplies of natural gas are flowing toward the eastern United States, but the effects of the bitter winter of 1977 are spreading even faster.

Layoffs, for example, have begun reaching into New England — an area spared until now because it uses little natural gas.

In Ohio and western New York state, two of the hardest-hit areas, calm weather and slightly rising temperatures on Wednesday gave something of a respite to cleanup crews and river pilots trying to deliver fuel.

But a new snow storm, moving through the West, promised more trouble as it headed for the Great Lakes.

And with an estimated 75 dead and two million already temporarily out of work nationwide, officials in Pennsylvania and New York expressed yet another worry: they fear major floods this spring if a quick thaw suddenly melts the huge amounts of snow now on the ground.

Carter signed emergency legislation approved by Congress Wednesday giving him the power to declare national or regional natural-gas emergencies and to order gas moved from state to state to keep homes and hospitals warm — but not to reopen shutdown plants.

The legislation also allows interstate pipelines to buy gas temporarily in some cases at higher prices prevailing in intrastate markets.

East Germany Forces Hiked

BERLIN (AP) — Fear of widespread dissident unrest or other disturbances apparently has prompted an alert of East Germany's armed forces, Western reports said Wednesday.

West German newspaper accounts said that in addition to putting regular forces on increased alert, Communist authorities also issued a military mobilization order affecting East German men under 35.

There was no official comment from East Germany.

A spokesman for a West Berlin agency specializing in East German affairs said: "We have learned that the National People's army has been put on increased alert and that furloughs from some units were cancelled."

The spokesman added, however, that the agency was unaware of any special orders for the call-up of additional men in East Germany.

An allied military spokesman said "we are aware of the mobilization reports but we have not confirmed them."

In West Germany, the newspaper Die Welt said allied observers from Berlin, Bonn and Brussels, where the Atlantic alliance is headquartered, were watching the developments in East Germany with "great interest."

Students Hold Prize Recital

A prize-giving and recital was held recently involving students from the Metchosin, Gordon Head and Cadboro Bay branches of the Josephine Butler School of Music.

The event took place at Emmanuel Baptist Church, Cedar Hill Cross Road, and was opened with a piano program by the senior students.

The varied presentation included a duet by Sharon Ferne and Sheryl Boothman and was climaxed with Debussy's Dr. Gradus ad Parnassus and Macedonian Mountain Dance by Hoveness performed by Janet Luney.

Also performing were Robbyn Finding, Jonathan Kirby, David Broderson, Christine Macdonald, Susan Johnston, Heather Nash, Michael Stamford, Alison Peake, Jackie Kirey, Sharon Kendall, Tim Archer, Mark Lewis, Bronwen Lewis and Ken Dosso.

Prizes and Royal Conservatory of Music certificates were awarded as follows: Musicianship: senior, Bronwen Lewis; intermediate, Sharon Kendall; junior, Sharon Ferne and David Lewis; elementary, Brent Hobbs and Dana Peterson. Maximum progress prize, Adrienne Baxter. Sight reading, Nancy Wilson.

Practical examinations: Brent Hobbs, Sherri Gill, Sharon Ferne. Theory: Bronwen Lewis, Elizabeth Henry. Preliminary Butler School examinations: Jill Harris, Martin Strange and Stephen Mackenzie; Kathy Jennings. Proficiency: Janet Luney, Ken Dosso, Sheril Boothman, Heather Nash, Robbyn Finding, Sherri Gill, Sandra Nash, Janice Boothman, Cathy Poyen, Stuart Frazer, Annette and Linda Floyd and Nancy Wilson.

Regional Dog Control Considered

A regional board committee indicated cautious interest Wednesday in taking over dog control in outlying areas, provided the province met any deficit in the first five years.

The provincial government had written earlier asking the Capital Region Board to consider such a move and offering a $1,500 grant, an amount some directors thought ludicruous.

While members of the region's works and services committee agreed dogs running loose in Sooke, Metchosin, View Royal and on Salt Spring Island were a problem, they were suspicious licence fees could ever cover costs.

There is only one domestic animal protection officer working in the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin area since the province laid off four officers last June.

Heritage's Influence Simply Galloping Ahead in Canada

Heritage Canada was incorporated four years ago. By next year there should be a new statutory holiday named in its honor.

This is one example of the growing influence of the influence of the independent foundation dedicated to preserving a sense of Canadian history through the character of its architecture.

Bob Phillips, Ottawa-based executive director of Heritage Canada, said in an interview Wednesday one of its aims is to get people thinking about heritage.

Three years ago Heritage Canada came up with national Heritage Day to be celebrated the third Monday in February.

The federal government recently introduced a bill declaring that day a statutory holiday, although it is too late to be enacted this year.

Phillips said he wants to get school children involved in heritage — get them to look at the streets and see what's worth saving and why and a holiday in the middle of the school year is just perfect for this, he said.

The foundation was launched with a $12 million federal grant, and operates on the interest. It main work is assisting 110 affiliated historical societies across Canada to develop projects too big for smaller groups to handle.

Locally, it is working with the Hallmark Society of Victoria in an effort to create a heritage conservation area in the Rockland area.

There are three main reasons Heritage Canada is interested in preserving old buildings.

The first is philosophic, Phillips said. Residents can get to know their roots better, understand its character and its pace of life.

A second reason is for esthetics — to keep the best of the old architecture so a community doesn't become the product of one generation.

And finally, economics. A restored heritage area makes property more valuable and there are no hidden subsidies as there are some in shopping centres, he said.

It also contributes to the tourist industry. Restoration is much better than phoney reproductions.

Heritage Canada becomes involved in a project at the invitation of local historical societies.

When asked for advice, Phillips said, the first consideration is if a building is to be restored, how will it contribute to the quality of life of that community.

Another factor, but much rarer, is the scarcity of a building's design or method of construction, Phillips said.

The foundation also gives awards — one of which will be given to Market Square later this month.

"I'm astonished at how much we have been able to accomplish in four years," Phillips said.

There are about 9,000 individual members across the country. Membership is $5 and includes the Heritage Canada magazine.

2 GRITS WALK OUT ON 'QUEEN'

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Quebec Liberal MPs refused to stand and two others left the Commons today when MPs rose to sing God Save the Queen after issuing a message of congratulation to the Queen for the 25th anniversary of her reign Sunday.

Louis Duclos (L — Montmorency) and Jacques Olivier (L—Longueuil) remained in their seats as those around them rose to sing the British anthem. Serge Joyal (L—Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemont) and Claude-Andre Lachance (L—Montreal Lafontaine-Rosemont) left the chamber.

But the two returned; and all four joined the House in singing O Canada after the tribute to the Queen.

Buckingham Palace announced today that the Queen and th Duke of Edinburgh will visit Canada from Oct. 14 to Oct. 19 as part of jubilee year celebrations.

The visit will centre on Ottawa.

WCB Probe Demand

The Workmen's Compensation Board Employees Union has condemned the government-commissioned P. S. Ross report on teh board and has asked Labor Minister Allan Williams to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the WCB objectively.

The call for a Royal Commission came in a brief submitted to the minister by the more than 1,000-member union.

The 23-page brief damns the Ross report and says Williams must move quickly to appoint a new chairman.

The controversial Ross report was released last year. The board has been without a chairman since Williams fired NDP-appointed Terry Ison in January 1976.

"One year without leadership is too long," the brief says.

The union charges that the continuation of the atmosphere of confrontation surrounding the WCB will impede the delivery of vital services.

"We believe that this heated debate will subside only after

Henry Lem . . . forced to give bandit $290

BOY, 10, LATEST VICTIM OF HOLDUP

A 10-year-old boy Wednesday became Greater Victoria's latest holdup victim.

Henry Lem was minding his parents store, the L & N Market at 530 Craigflower, when a thin man wearing a grey toque and sunglasses walked in at 8:40 p.m., said he had a gun and demanded money.

The boy, who thought he saw what appeared to be the handle of a gun sticking out of the man's pocket, handed over $290 in the till.

The man grabbed the money and ran off.

Police said the boy's mother was in the back of the store at the time.

Asked today if he was frightened, Henry replied "Yeah, I guess so."

His seven-year-old sister, Joyce sat reading a comic book throughout the robbery and was unaware of what was going on.

The robbery brings to 15 the number of armed incidents in Greater Victoria this year.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory warned storeowners Wednesday to remove temptation by keeping as little cash as possible on the premises.

Neither he nor Saanich police chief Bob Peterson believe there is any particular reason for the holdups other than a general increase in violent crimes across Canada.

Gregory urged people to be alert during robberies, and not try anything but concentrate on getting a detailed description of the robber, his clothing and of route taken in fleeing.

BENNETT PROBES LEAK

'NDPer Blacklist' Sent to Nielsen

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

An alleged blacklist identifying certain civil servants as members of the NDP was sent to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen shortly after the Socreds took power in late 1975, the NDP opposition revealed Wednesday.

Premier Bill Bennett denied the list is a blacklist and ordered an investigation by the attorney-general into what he termed a "major leak" of confidential government papers.

The list identifies eight employees of the then-department of lands as "NDPers" and was forwarded to Nielsen under the heading "PERSONAL AND STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL" by Dan Campbell, ex-Socred cabinet minister and now director of inter-governmental affairs.

There is no indication that any action has been taken against any of the employees identified, who include NDP-appointees to the land management branch and the Environment and Land Use Committee secretariat.

The list of employees is contained in a letter dated Dec. 23, 1975, to Campbell from Klaus Ohlemann, an employee of the land management branch.

The hand-written letter is headed simply "Dan," and charges that in the past few days "NDP supporters from different departments have held strategy meetings in an attempt to persuade the new ministers to carry on certain projects, take certain stands, continue policies, etc."

The letter identifies as "key people who have influenced the NDP in terms of government policy in Lands and the Secretariat:"

—Norm Pearson, deputy lands minister (whose order-in-council appointment was rescinded shortly after);

—Al Raine, ski development co-ordinator, still with the government;

—John Webster, special projects, lands management, still on contract;

—George Wilson, still director of the lands management branch;

—Frank Edgell, still assistant director;

—John Secter, environmental services unit, still with the government (the list also says Secter's staff is NDP);

—Allistair Crerar, former director of the ELUC secretariat (now on an exchange program working for the federal government);

—Dennis O'Gorman, then assistant-director of ELUC secretairat and now acting director (list identifies his "total staff" as NDP).

The letter says Pearson, Raine, Webster and Secter worked "extremely closely" with former NDP resources minister Bob Williams and says "some" helped in his campaign.

The letter also says the staff under John O'Rierdan, of the secretariat special projects unit, was NDP, but that O'Rierdan himself was the "black sheep of the Secretariat."

Accompanying the letter to Campbell, and also sent by Campbell to Nielsen, are two organizational charts of the land management branch containing several pencilled notations of "NDP" beside a few names.

Ohlemann, still an employee of the land management branch, could not be reached for comment.

About 10 minutes after the NDP released his letter in the legislature, his secretary reported he had just left on trip up-island and could not be reached.

The package of material sent by Campbell to Nielsen also includes a memo to Niel-

RAINE
. . . 'dreaming tales'

Ski consultant Al Raine — one of eight people named as an NDPer in the document the opposition calls a blacklist — reacted angrily today.

Raine, hired by the NDP and still working on a government ski development project, said today he has contacted his lawyer and plans to demand a retraction and a public apology from Klaus Othlemann, the man who prepared the list.

"He must have been sitting in a corner and dreaming up tales," Raine said.

Raine said he has never been a member of the NDP.

"I'm pretty a-political, but I've been well-known for my free enterprise sentiments."

He said it does not bother him especially to be identified as an NDPer but he is upset over being labelled an election campaign helper of former resources minister Bob Williams.

"I'm shocked that the letter (from Ohlemann to Campbell) wasn't returned, shocked that it was forwarded (to Neilsen)," he said.

Raine said he has had suspicions over the past year that he was getting the "cold shoulder" from the new administration because he was hired by the NDP, "but I figured it was just my little complexes coming out."

He said Ohlemann seems to have labeled anyone who worked with former deputy lands minister Norm Pearson or who was hired by the NDP, as a radical left-winger.

Raine said he has met Ohlemann several times and "now I'm' surprised he could look people in the eye and say friendly things."

Another government employee on the list, Lands Management branch director George Wilson said today he is not now and never has been a member of the NDP.

"I have worked for the government for over 25 years and have never considered the politics of the day," he said.

Wilson said he had always tried to keep out of politics anl has never held a card in any political party.

No Track Deal Nielsen Says

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Wednesday he made no representations to the B.C. Land Commission on an application by Meadow Creek Farms to allow quarter-horse racing on agricultural land in Surrey.

Nielsen said during question period in the legislature that he did visit the area with commission chairman Gary Runka and Meadow Creek president Captain Harry Terry, but that no deals were made.

"I don't think that (the tour) was improper in any way," said Nielsen.

A spokesman for the commission has confirmed it has approved Meadow Creek's application to set up a permanent racetrack in Surrey's Hazelmere Valley.

The commission under the former NDP government had refused to allow the racetrack, but that commission's members were fired by Nielsen on Oct. 7, 1976.

The decision to allow the racetrack to go ahead brought a demand Wednesday in the legislature by opposition MLAs that the government call an inquiry to determine why and how the commission gave the project the go-ahead.

It was also reported that some senior agriculture department staff are considering asking their minister, Jim Hewitt, to file a formal appeal against the removal of the racetrack land from the agricultural reserve.

However Hewitt said today he had not heard anything from his staff that he file a formal appeal of the decision.

"I haven't heard anything yet but I would certainly

McCarthy Confirms Back Pay

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy minister in charge of the civil service, issued a five-page news release Wednesday on earlier news stories about a Management Executive Group (MEG) plan which covers some 1,300 senior civil servants and other government employees excluded from union coverage because of the confidential nature of their jobs.

McCarthy said the release was "in reference to erroneous information given through the media."

McCarthy's outline of the plan was essentially the same as the story carried by The Times Wednesday.

The ~1,300 civil servants have received a cash and fringe benefits package which amounts to as much as 17 per cent per year over the past three years.

For a deputy minister earning $39,000 a year, this would mean he can now claim $13,000 in retroactive pay or benefits, with an additional $6,630 payable April 1.

McCarthy said the plan should not be regarded as a wage increase.

She said provincial govern-

NELSON (CP) — Police here will consider strike action unless the federal Anti-Inflation Board permits more than a 12-per-cent wage increase, Derek Price, president of the Nelson police association said Wednesday. Ottawa Cost-Share Plan Leaves Provinces Angry

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial finance ministers left Ottawa Wednesday angry about federal plans to change major cost-sharing agreements.

The scheduled two-day meeting ended in a sour note at noon Wednesday after another wrangling session over Ottawa's imposed proposals to end dollar-matching arrangements for hospital insurance, medical care and post-secondary education. The provinces claim they will lose money in the deal, possibly as much as $800 million.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald promised to take the provincial concerns to his cabinet colleagues before legislation to put the changes into effect by transferring more taxing power to the provinces comes before Parliament next week.

The complicated dispute over shared-cost programs was hammered out in broad outline by Prime Minister Trudeau and provincial premiers last December and is now being refined by officials.

Contrary to Prime Minister Trudeau's claim that the provinces stand to gain $680 million in new taxing power and grants from the deal, it now seems they could lose up to $800 million, Manitoba Finance Minister Saul Miller claimed.

The problem arises partly because Ottawa will cut off its current 50-50 dollar matching plans for health and education on March 31. The provinces are expected to use the money they get from additional tax-raising power Ottawa gave them effective Jan. 1 to partly replace the federal money they no longer receive.

But the provinces claim that because of the lag involved in receiving medical bills from doctors paid by the provincial governments, and other problems, they will encounter a serious cash flow problem if the federal payments stop abruptly in March.

RCMP Stole Blacklist Documents: MP

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The information which formed the basis for a 1971 "blacklist" of civil servants and others was stolen by the RCMP from the offices of a now-defunct organization in Toronto during a fire, Conservative MP Frank Oberle charged Wednesday.

Outside the Commons Oberle said he hoped his revelation of the burglary would prompt the government to reveal everything there is to know about the list.

He said the files from the Toronto company's office were found to be missing by the head of the company "during the fire or shortly after." The company no longer exists, he said.

The files contained "all the information that would have been necessary to compile the extra-parliamentary opposition list."

In Toronto, Prof. Howard Buchbinder, one of the founders of Praxis, a social action organization that spearheaded a "Poor People's Conference" in Toronto in 1970, said that files were discovered missing following a fire in that organization's offices in December, 1970.

Praxis figures prominently in the letter from then solicitor general Jean-Pierre Goyer which accompanied the list and was circulated to five fellow cabinet members.

Buchbinder said Wednesday that following the fire of unknown origin which did not damage the offices, he and fellow staff members found that the quarters had been very selectly burgled.

Items taken included cheque stubs, registration forms for the Poor People's Conference and the mailing list for a newsletter issued by the group.

"It was clear that whoever took the information was after certain items; nothing else in the files was disturbed," Buchbinder said Wednesday.

Oberle would not disclose any other details of the incident, saying he would do so today in the Commons if the government refuses to either supply the details or provide an inquiry or other forum "so I can tell what I know."

"I have information which makes me very nervous about the thing," said the MP who first divulged the list without the names, and Goyer letter, in the Commons last week.

In the Commons, Prime Minister Trudeau told Oberle that "the names of the people on that list came through the RCMP security services in the normal course of their operations

Oberle then asked whether Trudeau considered it "to be the normal course of an operation of a security service of the RCMP to illegally enter the offices of a legally-constituted corporation during a fire and selectively burglarize such an office."

Broadmead Called Threat to Downtown

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Downtown Victoria will suffer from urban blight, with block after block of empty or dying retail stores, if the proposed Broadmead shopping centre in Saanich ever becomes a reality, Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie predicted Wednesday.

McKenzie said Saanich municipality is pushing the project as strongly as it can in "direct contravention" of the Capital Region Board's long-range plan, because it is desperate to benefit from the resulting tax revenue.

But he said he is not prepared to stand by while a project which will seriously harm the economic health of the city's core area is being nurtured.

He said he will oppose the Broadmead scheme both at city council and regional levels — McKenzie was elected a regional director last November — even if that leads to a serious rift between Victoria and Saanich.

"I think in the months ahead we are going to have real confrontation on this," he warned in an interview.

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum has said the Broadmead shopping complex on Royal Oak Avenue, east of the Patricia Bay Highway, could be open by August, 1979. It would be the biggest shopping centre on Vancouver Island, with about 425,000 square feet of commercial space built on 60 acres of land.

Preliminary negotiations with the developers, Broadmead Estates, are expected to be completed by April, after which there will be a public hearing on the firm's application for a land-use contracts.

McKenzie believes the Broadmead venture, compounding the counter-attraction of Mayfair, Hillside and other major shopping centres, will virtually sound the deathknell for downtown Victoria as the thriving focus of retail activity in Greater Victoria.

He said he has seen that pattern repeated time after time in U.S. cities, where central core areas have withered away while a few miles out of town there are "flourishing regional shopping centres."

He said some concern has already been expressed by downtown merchants, but he suspects most of them have yet to grasp the full significance of Broadmead's threat.

"If the regional plan means anything at all Saanich will have to stand down on this," McKenzie said, adding that Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis may intervene to kill the proposal.

. . . But Saanich Says It's Going Ahead

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Saanich will proceed with the Broadmead shopping centre because it is vital to the municipality and has the blessing of the Capital Regional District, Mayor Ed Lum said today.

He was replying to charges by ald. Ron McKenzie who said Victoria merchants are alarmel by the Broadmead proposal because it would draw business away from the downtown core. McKenzie also charged the shopping centre contravenes the community plan for the Capital Regional District.

"The alderman is wrong," Mayor Lum said. "Broadmead has already been incorporated in the community plan for the region.

"If the alderman is concerned about the downtown area he should be promoting development there rather than trying to hold back development in Saanich."

Lum said downtown Victoria would continue to thrive if the city could solve its parking and traffic problems and could encourage development of apartments near the centre of the city.

Regional District chairman Jim Campbell today confirmed that phase one of the Broadmead shopping centre has the blessing of the regional board.

He said the regional district discussed the project two years ago and decided at that time it did not have to give formal approval for the first phase because of its relatively modest size. Phase one could be completed as early as August, 1979.

Campbell said the regional district may be required to give formal approval for any subsequent development of the shopping centre.

Alan Aldous, president of the Downtown Victoria Association, said any development at Broadmead appears to be premature but he would not oppose it.

"If the developers believe there is a large enough population now to support the project then they should go ahead with it. The people who are investing their money are in the best position to make a decision on that," Aldous said.

"My feeling is that the population of the area is not yet large enough to support a shopping centre at Broadmead and that it will draw some business from downtown Victoria because it is premature. But I am a free enterprise man and I will not oppose the development."

Reginald Hind, manager of Eaton's, said Broadmead would draw some business from the downtown core but the drain would not be serious. The main shoppers Eaton's plans a store in the second phase of Broadmead's development.

Faculty To Vote On Union

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The faculty at the University of Victoria will vote later this year on whether to form a union.

More than 300 members of the UVic Faculty Association have been pondering unionization since September when there was dissatisfaction expressed over wage increases for the 1976-77 teaching year.

At a recent meeting, about 75 members again debated forming a union.

The viewpoints presented at the meeting will be distributed among the membership and the executive will await general reaction before proceeding to the next step, president Rod Symington said.

No date for the vote has been set.

At an earlier meeting in November, the faculty association stripped senior administrators — faculty deans, the vice-president and president — of voting privileges.

The decision needed a two-thirds majority, and narrowly passed with 35 in favor and 19 against.

At the meeting, to debate unionization, those in favor said the current method of dealing with problems between faculty and administration is fuzzy and messy.

Those opposing unionization suggested basic university goals of teaching and research would not be served by unionization.

Organize Jobless —Knott

A Victoria Labor Council delegate criticized the labor movement Wednesday night for not taking some action to deal with Victoria's unemployment problem.

Ernie Knott of the International Woodworkers of America said the situation is very serious with the official unemployment rate at 10 per cent but the true rate probably "15 per cent or better."

The delegates agreed with his suggestion to have the executive bring the matter up for discussion at the next meeting in two weeks and to propose some policy for organizing the unemployed.

Knott, who is unemployed, noted that several local politicians have spoken up on the problem.

"Everyone but the labor movement is speaking out," he said.

Knott said the council should take some action while the legislature is sitting because no single group has had more of an adverse effect on the area's economy than the Social Credit government.

Delegates also agreed to write to the federal government requesting some action to relieve "the disastrous situation" at Yarrows shipyard.

Dave Higgins of the Boilermakers union had initiated the action saying 70 per cent of the shipyard employees, who belong to 13 different locals, are out of work.

He said 45 per cent of the members in his local, 191, are unemployed.

There are normally about 700 people employed at Yarrows and only about 200 are working, he added.

The delegates also reversed an executive decision to table the question of planning some labor education programs for Channel 10.

The members said the education committee should plan some programs and present them at the next meeting.

The delegates had voted at a meeting Jan. 19 to begin planning the programs but the executive later decided to table the matter.

Stan Darlington, second vice-president, said the fear was expressed by some executive members that such programs "might not do our public image any good."

Daryl Anderson of the Canadian Union of Public Employees asked if there is any way "our image could get any lower than it is now."

Jack Groves of the International Woodworkers of America said the executive had no right to table the matter after it was approved by council delegates.

Student Role Urged In Decision-Making

British Columbia students should be allowed to participate in decision-making in accordance with their maturity and "enjoy feelings of self-reliance, self-confidence, self-discipline and dignity."

The recommendation is one of many in a study, prepared by the B.C. Teachers Federation, which has not formally been made public.

The study also says teachers should have the right to negotiate "all working conditions and conditions of the learning environment" and receive enough time and money "to continually upgrade professionally."

Teachers should also be able to develop, along with their students, the testing procedures to be used in each school.

In its introduction, the study says it is the first step in a review for the BCTF of "all aspects of authority and responsibility in B.C. education."

Among students' rights, the report lists:

—easy access to stimulating learning resources and recreation facilities;

—growth-stimulating influences "such as appropriate temperature, adequate lighting, soft colors, proper humidity, cleanliness and ambient sound levels;

—exposure to global concerns;

—assurance of "due process" in their dealings with the education system and access to educational options to alternatives to suit needs.

Teachers have the responsibility to create stimulating and challenging learning environments and educational alternatives, expose students to various systems of values and to cause students to examine their own values.

Referring to curriculum, the report says teachers have the responsibility to provide a program to meet the needs of each student and "resist the imposition of universal programs and standards."

The main responsibility of school boards and the provincial government is to provide the resources and funding to achieve these goals.

The education ministry should "resist being a prescriptive agent and . . . become a support agent which encouraged maximum decentralization of decision making," the report says.

14-YEAR-OLD FACES CHARGE

A 14-year-old boy faces a charge of criminl negligence stemming from a high-speed car chase through Saanich early today.

A Saanich police spokesman said an officer on patrol on the Pat Bay Highway near Vanalman at 2:04 a.m. tried to pull over a southbound car for a routine check but the car sped off.

Three other Saanich police cars pursued the car at speeds up to 85 miles per hour for more than 10 miles before finally halting it at a roadblock at Douglas and Saanich Road.

Police said the pursued car passed through so many red lights and stop signs officers lost track.

No one was injured. One of the police vehicles received minor damage at the roadblock.

The car driven by the boy belongs to his family, police said.

SHAW

New Post For Shaw

Greater Victoria school districts secretary-treasurer Ernest Shaw has been appointed to the newly-created post of legal and financial affairs adviser.

Shaw's salary will stay the same in the new post where his duties include assisting the board and superintendent on legal and financial matters, and reviewing and drafting the board's policies and bylaws.

Board chairman Susan Brice said the district has been criticized for not having its policies up to date, but no one on staff had time to look into legal and financial policies.

A new secretary-treasurer will be hired later.

Concrete Commitment Demanded on Hospital

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said today public pressure should be kept on Health Minister Bob McClelland to make him spell out when a new hospital will be completed.

Dr. Norman Bailey said it is public pressure which "extracted" a statement from McClelland Wednesday that the new hospital to be built in View Royal will eventually have about 500 beds.

"The public now has an indefinite promise," said Bailey. "It needs a more concrete commitment from him on when the hospital will expand to 500 beds."

The health minister had specified earlier that the new hospital would have 300 beds and that Victoria General would be scaled down from 430 to 169 beds.

BAILEY
. . . keep up pressure

This led the society, which has close to 500 doctors as members, to launch a petition campaign last week urging him not to in effect split Victoria General onto two sites.

Such a move would adversely affect patient care, increase costs and demoralize staff, the society argued. Bailey said Wednesday about 4,000 signatures in support had been gathered in the first three working days since doctors started leading the campaign.

McClelland made clear Wednesday the new hospital will start with 300 beds, with services built in to eventually handle 500 beds. He indicated it was too soon to say when the hospital would reach its ultimate size.

Base Tries for Energy Cut

Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt will try to reduce energy consumption 10 per cent next week as part of a national conservation program.

If the goal is achieved, the base will try to maintain the new level of consumption on a continuing basis for the next decade.

It is part of a continuing conservation program which began in 1974. In that year the total electricity bill for the base was $2.2 million. By 1976 it rose to $3.2 million but this was $236,000 less than it would have been without the conservation methods.

These include turning off lights when rooms are not in use, reducing lighting in offices being used and turning off non-essential heat sources.

The base has also been conserving gasoline by converting to compact cars from larger vehicles wherever possible.
